PATTON'S MAJORTY 956 OVER EMERY IN COUNTY

Alexander for State Senator by 132 Over Womelsdorff,

MEYER ON TWO TICKETS

Gets Republican and Democratic Nomination for Representative—Cunningham, Noll aud Auman Democratic State Delegates.

Summarized, the results at the primaries, on Saturday, last, follow.

Charles E. Patton won the Republican nomination for Congress over Lewis Emery, his majority in Centre County being 956.

Patton's official majority in the district is about 1300. His official majority in Cameron county is 196 and in Clearfield about 1700. The official count in Clearfield will not be completed, before some time today. Emery had 1542 official majority in McKean county. This nominates Patton with a few votes more than 1300 majority in the district.

For the Republican nomination for State Senator, Philip E. Womelsdorff had in Centre County 757 plurality over Joseph Alexander and 1072 plurality over Frederick R. Scofield. In Clearfield County, however, Mr. Alexander polled sufficient votes to overcome Womelsdorff's lead in this county and thus won the nomination.

The combined vote for State Senator in Centre and Clearfield counties follows:

	Alex'nd'r	Scof'ld	Wom'lsd'ff
Centre	490	175	1247
Clearfield	1561	1734	672
Total	2051	1909	1919

Alexander's plurality over Womelsdorff, 132; over Scofield, 142.

J. C. Meyer, Democrat, received 165 votes for the Republican nomination for State Representative. This was the highest vote polled for any person for this nomination. He was renominated on the Democratic ticket. The Republicans presented no candidate for the nomination.

The only other contest at the primaries was that among the Democrats for State delegates. The three elected were A. L. Auman, of Centre; William H. Noll, of Pleasant Gap, and J. Mitchell Cunningham, of Bellefonte.

The official vote for CONGRESS was as follows:

Patton,	1,484
Emery,	528
Majority	956

For STATE SENATOR.

Womelsdorff,	1,247
Wider,	490
Scofield.	175
Womelsdorff's plurality over Alexander,	757

The official vote for the several Democratic candidates for State delegates follows:

Cunningham,	599
Auman,	577
Noll,	564
Foster,	540
Dauberman,	478
Thompson,	250
Corneily,	155

Readers of "The Republican" were able to learn of the result at the primaries in the special edition which we issued on Monday. Owing to a case of inexcusable delay in handling that edition at the Bellefonte postoffice many subscribers did not receive their papers until Tuesday, when they should have had them on Monday afternoon and evening.

In our special edition we gave the complete returns and with but one result which was not borne out by the official vote. The reports on hand at that time indicated the election of Dauberman as one of the Democratic State delegates, whereas the complete returns show the election instead of Auman.

Of all the newspapers in Centre County "The Republican" was the only one to display sufficient enterprise to publish a special edition and give its readers early news. Because of this fact the readers of this newspaper had the full returns days in advance of those persons who subscribe to other papers.

As was told in our special edition, in addition to announcing the nomination of Patton over Emery, the nomination of Alexander for State Senator and the selection of Meyer for both Republican and Democratic noninations for State Representative, we published the fact of the nomination of W. C. Heinle for Congress on the Democratic ticket and of the renomination by the Democrats of George M. Dimeling for State Senator.

The Prohibitionists elected John R. Williams, of Lemont, as County Chairman; John I. Thompson, also of Lemont, for secretary, and George M. DeHass, treasurer, respectively, of the County Committee.

WEDDING BELLS RING

Miss Susan Donachy Becomes Bride of Alexander Bolton.

A small but very pretty wedding was that at 10.30 o'clock yesterday when Miss Susan Rosella Donachy, daughter of Samuel Donachy, became the bride of Alexander Clarence Bolton, of Wheeling, West Virginia. The cememony was performed at the home of the bride, on North Allegheny Street, and was witnessed by the immediate families of the happy young couple.

Charles Donachy, brother of the bride, was best man, while the bride was attended by Miss Alma Bolton, sister of the groom. After a wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Bolton departed on the 1.07 train for Pittsburg, enroute to their future home, at Wheeling.

The bride is a very pretty and talented young lady and is popular with a wide circle of friends in Bellefonte. Mr. Bolton was for several years a student at the Bellefonte Academy.

TO CELEBRATE THE 4th.

Public Meeting Called for Friday Night to Plan General Good Time.

Dr. Edith Schad, Mrs. Frank P. Blair and Mrs. Harry Keller have been chosen a committee to arrange for a public meeting at the Court House tomorrow (Friday) evening, at 7.30 o'clock, to arrange for a general good time on the Fourth of July. It is hoped the meeting will be largely attended by the citizens of Bellefonte.

Under an ordinance of Council fireworks are prohibited in the borough, so that if the day is to be celebrated it must be arranged along other lines. There will be no demonstration at Hecla Park, so far as is now known, and it is proposed to devise something that will enable everybody in Bellefonte to have a good time at little or no expense.

SCHOOL BOARD ORGANIZED

Dr. M. J. Locke, President, and W. H. Crissman, Secretary.

The Bellefonte School Board met for organization and elected the following:

President, Dr. M. J. Locke.
Secretary, W. H. Crissman.
Treasurer, D. F. Fortney.

Dr. Locke succeeds Henry C. Quigley as president, Mr. Quigley retiring from the board. Mr. Crissman succeeds J. K. Barnhart as secretary, Mr. Barnhart also retiring. Mr. Fortney succeeds G. Ross Parker as treasurer. Mr. Parker, however, continues as a member of the board.

Took Charge of Their Team.

County Detective Meyers, of Lock Haven, and a man from Farrandsville, accompanied by two women, drove to Bellefonte on Thursday of last week and while here put up their team at the Palace livery. Chief of Police Dukeman, who is also an officer of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, declared that the horses had been terribly beaten and refused to allow them to be taken from the livery. Meyers insisted on taking the team but Dukeman would not agree and the quartet were compelled to return to Lock Haven by train The owner, a Lock Haven liveryman, was telephoned for and the team was returned.

STEAM ENGINE CRASHES THROUGH ROTTEN BRIDGE

William R. Orner Pinioned Under Mass of Twisted Machinery.

INJURIES PROVE FATAL

Literally Scalded to Death by Escaping Steam—Liberated by Chiseling Off Bolts Was Former Resident of Centre County.

Sad and tragic was the death on Thursday, last, at McAlavey's Fort, of William R. Orner, an old resident of Centre County and a gallant member of Company D, 45th Regiment, Penna. Volunteers. On Decoration Day Mr. Orner was guiding a steam engine, hitched to a stone crusher, on the road between Petersburg and Cottage, when a bridge over Globe Run, which had been condemned, collapsed and he wae pinioned beneath the engine while his body was terribly scalded by escaping steam. Held a captive by the mass of twisted iron for over one hour he was only liberated by means of cold chisels which were used to cut off bolts holding the machinery together.

Although his body, from the hips down, was frightfully scalded, Mr. Orner lived until Thursday, last, and was conscious to the time of his death.

It is expected that suit for heavy damages will be entered against the officials of Huntingdon County by Mr. Orner's family. The bridge in question was condemned about one year ago, and at that time signs announcing the fact were posted for the information of travelers. Mr. Orner was not aware of the condition ot the bridge. The signs had been removed or had fallen into decay and when he happened along with his engine and stone crusher there was nothing to warn him of danger. The bridge was about ten feet high. Assuming that the structure was in good condition, Mr. Orner started to cross with his engine, when suddenly the timbers gave way and dropped to the creek below. Mr. Orner had no chance to escape. Although rescuers were soon on the ground they found it impossible to liberate him, his body having become firmly wedged under many tons of iron and timbers.

When the engine dropped several valves broke and the escaping steam poured over the unfortunate man who was unable to move. Willing hands worked desperately to remove him to a point of safety, but by the time this had been accomplished his body was so badly scalded that no hope was entertained for his recovery. He was removed to his home, where he lingered for a number of days, death finally ending his suffering on Thursday. Funeral services were held on Sunday from his late residence, at McAlavey's Fort.

Mr. Orner was born at Hecla Furnace, Centre County. He served two enlistments in the Civil war, one for three months and one for three years. After the war he was married to Elizabeth Cox and settled at Linn & McCoy's and was their blacksmith for a number of years. He also lived at Pleasant Gap for several years. His wife preceded him to the grave nine years ago this month. He subsequently was again married, this time to Mrs. Mary Houst, of Huntingdon county, who survives him. His children by his first wife are Mrs. David Bigelow, of Petersburg, Pa.; Mrs. Smith Mitchell and William, of McAlavey's Fort; Harry, of Juniata; and May, Ella and Margaret, of Altoona. The last three mentioned are unmarried.

CUT WORM DESTROYING CORN AND VEGETABLES

Many Farmers Report Heavy Losses Due to Ravage of Pest.

SURFACE HAS REMEDY

State Zoologist Advises Centre County Farmers to Apply Mixture of One Part Paris Green and Forty Parts Middlings.

From all parts of Centre County come reports of unprecedented damage to corn and vegetables by the deadly cut worm. Many acres of corn have been ruined and farmers are apparently powerless to stop the ravages of the pest.

Truck gardens also have been damaged by the cut worm. For the first time in the recollection of truck farmers, the cut worm is killing tomato plants. Thousands of cabbage plants and other vegetables have been ruined.

To the continued cold weather is attributed the widespread damage caused by the cut worm. In some instances the worms have cut down row upon row of corn stalks in the same field and each stalk has been removed as clean as if a knife had been used.

With a desire of helping the farmers to find some means for checking the spread of the cut worm, "The Republican" yesterday got into communication with Dr. Surface, the State Zoologist, at Harrisburg, who suggested the following remedy:

Mix one part of paris green with forty parts of middlings; add a small quantity of old molasses. Apply on ground about corn stalks or vegetables.

This remedy, Professor Surface said to "The Republican," has been tried in a number of parts of the State and has succeeded in checking the cut worm. He added that the mixture will give the best results if applied in a corn patch or a garden before the cut worm has got too much of a start.

Explaining how to prepare the mixture and apply it, Dr. Surface said to "The Republican":

"Take the one part Paris Green and the forty parts middlings and mix them dry. Then add water which has been sweetened with some old brown molasses. Sufficient water should be added to make the mixture a mash. To apply it, use a small paddle, walking along the row of corn and dropping a little of the mixture as you go. This should be done in the evening, when the cut worms will be attracted to the mixture by the smell of the mollasses. In making the mixture the proportions of Paris Green and middlings may be one part to forty parts, either in weight or quantity. The method I have outlined may at first seem to be a good bit of trouble, but it is very easily used. It will kill the cut worms."

With the hope that Dr. Surface's suggestion may prove of benefit to the farmers of this county we gladly publish it. Any farmer or other person desiring further information on the subject is requested to communicate with Dr. Surface.

Yearick-Hoy Family Reunion.

The annual reunion of the Yearick-Hoy families will be held at Hecla Park on Wednesday, June 22. All members of these families and their friends are cordially invited to attend.

Flag Day, June 14.

Tuesday, June 14, is "Flag Day," and the citizens of Bellefonte are requested tounfurl flags, both on their residences and on public buildings.

TO DELINQUENT SUBSCRIBERS.

The Post Office Department, at Washington, D. C., has notified us that every delinquent subscriber to "The Republican" must be dropped from our list.

While we regret that such a notice has been issued, we have no alternative in the matter and the order will be obeyed.

We hereby ask every subscriber to "The Republican" to examine the label on his paper today, see if you are in arrears and if so, pay up at once.

The order of the Post Office Department is mandatory upon every subscriber who owes more than one year's subscription.

Under the new management of "The Republican" we have endeavored to settle delinquent subscriptions in order to comply with the postal regulations. There are still quite a number who have not adjusted their accounts. Unless all delinquents pay up immediately we will be forced to drop their names from our list or "The Republican" will be barred from the second class postage mails.

In plain words, if you owe for more than one year's subscription you must pay it or we will not be permitted to send you the paper.

The management of "The Republican" desires to say that were it in our power we would accommodate every subscriber who is delinquent. We know that it doesn't always suit every man to pay $1, or $2, or $3 on short notice. But it is not within our power to extend this accommodation. We, therefore, ask you to pay up and save us the embarrassment of dropping your name from our list.

DEATH OF WESLEY MEYERS

Was Well Known Democrat; Seriously Ill But One Day.

Wesley Meyers died at 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, last. He had been in poor health for about one year but was able to be about until Friday of last week. He became seriously ill on Sunday morning.

Deceased was born at Struble 58 years ago and was a son of Joseph and Elizabeth Meyers, who were among the pioneer settlers. He spent his boyhood days on the farm and attended the district school in Curtin. In 1879 he married Miss Lizzie Hintzelman. Surviving are his widow and a son, Edward, a professor of mathematics at Pittsburg, and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. A. V. Kline, of State College; William J. and Henry, of Alexandria; J. F., of Fairbrook, and D. W., of Boalsburg. Mr. Meyers early in life became identified with the Reformed church and continued an active member to the time of his death.

In politics Mr. Meyers was a Democrat of the Jeffersonian type and was one of the best known men in the valley. By all who knew him he was held in high esteem for his sterling honest and intergrity. He was a butcher by trade and remained in business until compelled by failing health to retire. Funeral services were held on Wednesday, burial being made at Boalsburg, with Rev. A. A. Black officiating.

JOSEPH ALLEN SWIRES.

Joseph Allen Swires, a well known resident of Milesburg, died at his late home at that place on Wednesday of last week. He had been ill but about one week. Deceased was aged 49 years, 6 months and 6 days. He is survived by a widow. Interment was made at Curtin.

JAMES HEVERLY.

James Heverly, a former resident of Bellefonte, died on Wednesday of last week at his late residence, at LaPorte, Indiana. Deceased was aged 71 years. Surviving are one brother, F. F. Heverly, and a niece, Mrs. Clyde Blackford, both of Bellefonte.

GEORGE W. STULLER.

George W. Stuller, father of Mrs. Mary Johnston, of Philipsburg, died on May 27, last, at Brisbin. Deceased was born in Huntingdon county and during the Civil war served aa a member of the 22nd Penna. Cavalry.

J. WITTENBURG.

J. Wittenburg died on Monday at his late home, at Williamsport, after an extended illness. Deceased was aged 76 years and was the father of Samuel Wittenburg, well known in business circles in Philipsburg.

"FATS" AND "LEANS" WILL BATTLE FOR BUTTERMILK

But it Will be Bloodless Fight Tomorrow on Hughes Field.

HELP NEW BALL TEAM

Proceeds for Bellefonte Club in New Central Penna. League Season Opens About June 20—Lock Haven, Renovo and Jersey Shore in Race.

Ho! Ho!

Is a "fat" better than a "lean?"

Or can a "lean" lick the stuffin' out of a "fat?"

You don't know?

Well, go out to Hughes Field tomorrow (Friday) afternoon, at 3 o'clock, and see the greatest baseball game played in this neck o'woods in a quarter of a century. It will be between the "Fats" and the "Leans", and it will be worth while. On the two teams, when they tear at each others throats, will be found some of the most sensational players in the world.

What's the game for?

In the first place, its to determine whether all the fat men in town have any right to be chesty or whether the class who represent nothing but a small quantity of skin and bone are the real thing. Of course, like a woman's argument, the question won't be settled, but the public will be afforded a splendid opportunity to do a little quiet thinking as to which class is worth believing.

In the second place, the proceeds are for the benefit of the Bellefonte club in the new Central Penna. League. Baseball in Bellefonte this summer is a "go." A four-club league has been established, with Bellefonte, Lock Haven, Renovo and Jersey Shore as the aspirants for the pennant. Each town will have a strong team and a lively race is anticipated. A meeting of representatives of the Bellefonte club was held at the Logan Hose House last night and plans discussed for the season, which will open about June 20. The Bellefonte club will be composed chiefly of the best players on this year's State College and Bellefonte Academy teams. The work of making up the schedule for the season will be completed in about one week.

As we have said the proceeds of tomorrow's game will be devoted to the Bellefonte club. So along about 2.30 o'clock tomorrow make sure that you have 25 cents in your pocket, go out to Hughes Field and hand it over to the man at the gate. "The Republican" will refund 25 cents to every man who pays that amount to see tomorrow's game and then has the nerve to say that it wasn't worth the money.

Look at the line-up for the "Fats":
Harry Keller, 1st b.
George Knisely, c.
John Curtin, p.
Miles Decker, s.s.
Sid. Krumrine, 2nd. b.
Henry Quigley, 3rd. b.
Clayt. Brown, l. f.
Jake Knisely, c. f.
Billy Cassidy, r. f.

Now take a look at the "Leans":
Johnny Rowe, l. f.
George Meek, 2nd. b.
Mike Hazel, 1st. b.
Doc. Dale, p.
John Lyon, r. f.
Doc. Hayes, 2nd. b.
Jim. Corl, c. f.
Arthur Kimport, s. s.
Bill Brown, c.

When you are through looking over the teams you will have seen but half the show. Now look at this aggregation of side-line artists:

Umpire, Bill. Hurley.
Water Boy, John Knisely.
Manager of "Fats," Jake Marks.
Manager of "Leans", Francis Speer.
Surgeon, Doc. Fisher.

A bucket of juicy, fresh buttermilk has been purchased and will be placed on a reserved seat at third base for the first man to reach that bag. The first man who says that he doesn't like butter milk will be branded a quitter.

J. Mitchell Cunningham and J. Linn Harris, who will manage the Bellefonte club this summer, will be on deck to sign up any fat man or any lean man who can play ball.

Freeman Held for Court.

Earl Freeman, a son of George Freeman, of this place, was on Monday held under $300 bail for court by Alderman Batzle, of Williamsport, on the charge of stealing a violin from B. G. Roberts, also of Williamsport. Young Freeman has written to his father, saying that he is entirely innocent and that this will be demonstrated when he is tried.

THE BASTILLE

Rise and the Fall of the Famous State Prison of France.

The famous French prison known as the Bastille was started on April 22, 1356, by order of Charles V. The Bastille turned out to be an important structure in history, and its fall on July 15, 1789, marked the beginning of the French Revolution. It was originally intended by Charles as a defense against the English. When it came to be used as a state prison it was provided with vast bulwarks and ditches. The Bastille had four towers of five stories each on each of its large sides. It was partly in these towers and partly in underground cellars that the prisoners were situated. It was capable of containing from seventy to eighty prisoners, a number frequently reached during the reigns of Louis XIV. and Louis XV., the majority of them being persons of the higher ranks. On its site now stands the Column of July, erected in memory of the patriots of 1789 and 1830.

The name bastille, or bastel, in ancient times was given to any kind of structure calculated to withstand a military force, and thus, formerly in England and on the borders of Scotland, the term bastel house was usually applied to places of strength and fancied security. The French Bastille was originally called the Bastille St. Antoine.

Stephen Marcel, provost of the merchants, undertook the erection of the French Bastille. The building was enlarged in 1369 by Hugh Aubmot, provost of Paris under Charles V. He added two towers, which, being placed opposite to those already existing on each side of the gate, made of the Bastille a square fort, with a tower at each of the four angles.

After the death of Charles V. Aubriot, who had many enemies, was prosecuted for alleged crimes and was condemned in the Bastille, of which, according to some historians, he was the first prisoner. After some time he was removed thence to Fort l'Eveque, another prison, from which he was liberated in 1381 by the insurrection of the Maillotins.

After this insurrection, in 1382, the young king, Charles VI., still further enlarged the Bastille by adding four towers to it, each 100 feet high, thus giving it, instead of the square form it originally possessed, the shape of an oblong or parallelogram. To increase its strength the Bastille was surrounded by a ditch 25 feet deep and 120 feet wide. The road which formerly passed through it was turned to one side.

The Bastille from its commanding position was closely connected with important affairs in French history and was occupied by the Guises in 1588, by Charles IV. in 1581, the Frondeurs in 1649 and Conde in 1652.

It was natural, therefore, that the Bastille should be one of the first objects of attack at the outbreak of the Revolution. In July 15, 1798, the populace of Paris, recruited chiefly from the Faubourg St. Antoine, attacked the fortress and stormed it after a half hearted resistance by the governor, De Launay, and a handful of Swiss. The governor and seven of his men were killed, the archives of the prison scattered, and the prisoners, seven in number, were carried through the streets rnd hailed as victims of tyranny and martyrs in the people's cause. The building itself was torn down. The anniversary of the taking of the Bastille is celebrated every year as the national holiday of France.

How Senator Hanna Won the Boy.

When Senator Hanna was walking through his factory in Cleveland, some years ago, on the lookout for new ideas or anything which would aid the progress of business, says the National Magazine, he overheard a little redheaded lad remark:

"Wish I had old Hanna's money and he was in the poorhouse."

The Senator returned to his office and rang to have the boy sent to him. The boy came to the office timidly, just a bit conscience-stricken, wondering if his remark had been overheard and ready for the penalty. As the lad twisted his hands and nervously stood on one foot before the gaze of those twinkling dark eyes fixed on him by the man at the desk, he felt the hand of Uncle Mark on his shoulder:

"So you wish you had old Hanna's money and he was in the poorhouse, eh? Suppose your wish should be granted, what would you do?"

"Why," stammered the lad, "the first thing I would do, sir, would be to get you out of the poorhouse."

The Senator laughed and sent the boy back to his work. Today he is one of the managers of a large factory, but he never tires of telling the story that held his first job.

GEORGE G. FINK,
County Treasurer.

What Imagination Will Do.

Doctor Charles K. Mills, the nerve specialist of Philadelphia, told at a dinner an amusing story of the influence of the imagination on the health.

"A young bank-clerk," he said, "feeling fagged from the excessive heat of a trying summer, consulted a physician. The physician questioned him, sounded his lungs, and then said, gravely:

"I will write you tomorrow."

"The next day the bank-clerk received a letter from the medical man telling him that his right lung was gone and his heart seriously deranged, and advising him to lose no time in putting his affairs in order.

"'Of course,' the doctor wrote, 'you may live for weeks, but you would do well to leave nothing of importance unsettled.'

"Naturaliy, the young bank-clerk was very much depressed by this sad letter, nothing less than a death-warrant. He did not, of course, go to work that morning, and before noon he was having trouble with his respiration, while severe pains shot rapidly through his heart. He did not get up all day, and on toward midnight he had a sinking spell that caused his people to send post-haste for the doctor.

"The doctor on his arrival was astonished.

"'Why,' he cried 'there were no symptoms of this sort yesterday! What on earth have you been doing to yourself?'

"The patient's face screwed up with pain, he pressed his hand to his breast and said feebly:

"'Its the heart, I suppose, doctor.'

"'The heart?' said the doctor. 'There was nothing yesterday the matter with your heart.'

"'My lungs, then,' the patient groaned.

"'What ails you?' the doctor shouted. You don't seem to have been drinking.'

"'Your letter, doctor—you told me I had only a few weeks to live.

"'Nonsense! Are you crazy? I told you to take a month's vacation at the seashore, and you'd be as good as new again.'

"The patient drew the fateful letter from a drawer beside the bed.

"'Well,' said the doctor, glancing at it, this is a pretty mess. This letter was intended for another man. My secretary mixed up the envelopes.'

The patient laughed. He sat up in bed. His recovery was rapid. That night, in fact, he was well again.

"And what—" ended Doctor Mills, "what of the dying consumptive who had got this young man's letter? The consumptive, delighted with the prediction that a month at the seashore would make a sound man of him, packed his trunk, and took the first train for New England. That was ten years ago, and today he is in fair health."—Good Stories.

A Compromise Summer Home.

Instead of buying a conventional summer home or going to the other extreme, we compromised. Three buildings were erected: a dining-room, a sleeping pavilion, and a kitchen, all of which were painted white with gray trimmings and green shingle roofs, making a very pleasing effect. The posts are all cedar, the rest of the woodwork is of poplar or white pine, and while made of finished lumber, the effect is rustic.

The sleeping pavilion is one room, divided by two curtains (which are hung over stout wires) as to form two sleeping apartments with a little hall-way through. These, of course, could be subdivided if desired. On clear nights every side curtain is raised, thus affording sleep practically in the open air, though if it rains the canvas curtains can be instantly lowered and fastened and the sleepers made as comfortable as at home. The beds were all made by a carpenter, and fitted with springs and mattress they differ only in appearance from the ordinary bed. Under each is a neat box on rollers for keeping one's belongings, likewise each post is provided with clothes hooks for hanging an occasional garment. Big drygoods boxes with a mirror above serve for dressers, and a table in the center of the pavilion is kept for magazines, a sewing basket, and the evening lamp (if anybody should happen to stay up later than dark.)

The dining-room is a one-room cottage, with a big concrete fireplace and a large double closet on each side of the chimney. The table is set with white oilcloth and the granite ware that comes in sets like china dishes.

The kitchen is built to resemble the sleeping pavilion. A very convenient feature is an old banking-desk which has been converted into a cupboard, large enough to hold all of the kitchen and table utensils in its many compartments.

There are, of course, many advantages and pleasures of a permanent camp near one's own town; it is not necessary to catalogue them. Each family must work out its own problems according to its particular tastes and opportunities. For some, tents may be quite satisfactory; others will prefer a houseboat, and still others will vote for a portable house. And, after all, methods and facilities are of only secondary consideration. The big thing, the desirable thing, is to make a start.—Bertha Scott in Recreation for June.

Dyspepsia is America's curse. Burdock Blood Bitters conquers dyspepsia every time. It drives out impurities, tones the stomach, restores perfect digestion, normal weight, and good health.

BURDENS LIFTED

From Bellefonte Backs—Relief Proved by Lapse of Time.

Backache is a heavy burden;
Nervousness wears one out;
Rheumatic pain; urinary ills;
All are kidney burdens—
Daily effects of kidney weakness.
No use to cure the symptoms,
Relief is but temporary if the cause remains.
Cure the kidneys and you cure the cause.
Relief comes quickly—comes to stay.
Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney ills;
Prove it by your neighbor's case.
Here's Bellefonte testimony.
The story of a permanent cure.

Mrs. James Corl, 361 E. Bishop St., Bellefonte, Pa., says:" A member of my family used Doan's Kidney Pills in 1907, procuring them from Green's Pharmacy Co. and a complete cure from backache and kidney complaint was received. At that time we publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills and as there has been no return of the trouble, we again give this remedy a word of praise. You are welcome to publish this statement for the benefit of other kidney sufferers.

BRONCHITIS

Need of Watchful Care During An Attack of the Disease.

Bronchitis is the name given to any inflammation of the mucous membrane of the bronchial tubes. In a fairly healthy adult an attack of acute bronchitis is not a very terrifying thing, although it is most distressing and disagreeable.

It is as if an unusually severe cold and cough, instead of confining itself to the head and throat, wandered on down the chest. The irritation of the tubes results in a constant cough and sense of breathlessness. The temperature rises, the patient feels sick, the more so that the incessant coughing does not result in the throwing off of any secretion to speak of.

In a day or two the inflammation in the tubes subsides, the temperature goes down, there is less and less sense of oppression, and the secretion gradually becomes freer. From this point there is gradual recovery, as from an ordinary bad cold.

On the other hand, in the very old or the very young or with those whose powers of resistance are lessened from any cause whatever bronchitis is a dangerous disease. It has a tendency to run from the acute into the chronic form, in which the sufferer may be perfectly well during the summer months or while in a warm climate, but at the least chill or exposure must expect and will get his inevitable attack of bronchitis with symptoms persisting until the return of warm weather

STAGING A MUSICAL COMEDY

Outlay of $50,000 Before the Curtain Goes Up the First Time.

People do not realize the expensiveness of putting on a musical comedy these days nor the risk a manager runs that the show after his enormous outlay isn't a failure. It cost $52,000 to raise the curtain on "The Dollar Princess," says the American Magazine. It really did. The present writer has seen the books, and they show it. "The Dollar Princess" was produced in New York City in September, 1909. It had been successful in Germany some years before it was seen here. A great many radical changes had to be made in the book and in the music.

The first thing, then, was to call in the book surgeons. They attacked that third act, chopped it all to pieces, sprinkled chloride of lime on the fragments and them reassembled them in their present wholly aseptic form. Now, of course, all this work cost both money and brains, as well as time.

Now, anybody who has had his attention called to this sometimes painful subject, through the medium of bills or otherwise, knows that you cannot buy a first-class gown from a modiste of reputation for less than $100. This sum would in fact, be a pretty modest average, and stage gowns must be the real thing.

In the case of "The Dollar Princess," there are 35 chorus girls thus gowned in the first act, the same number in the second act, and 65 in the third act. Taking into account a few who have two changes in one act, they wear 160 gowns. At the modest estimate of $100 each these gowns have cost a total of $16,000.

The chorus man is, it is true, a humble individual, but he has to be dressed, and well dressed. Twenty of him appear in "The Dollar Princess," with different suits for each act. Allowing $50 a suit—a low estimate—that makes a $4,000 total for dressing the modest chorus man.

Consider for a moment the kindred subject of hats. The women in "The Dollar Princess" wear 105 of these, first and last. Go into the average metropolitan millinery shop, try and get a smart hat for $20, and see what you get. But put it at $20, even, and you'll see that these 105 hats cost $2,100. The shoes and stockings for the chours girls alone cost, roughly speaking, a minimum of $23,380.

Of course, the clothing for the principals is much more expensive. The "diamond dress" that Miss Valli wears cost $400 in Paris. All the costumes for the principals were imported. There are 16 of them. Each of them wears three different costumes, and if you put this total cost at $10,000 you allow a [illegible] $200 each. The hair ornaments worn by the women of the chorus cost $395, and we haven't said anything at all about petticoats and other invisible garment, for all of which the management pays, easily $35,000 worth of clothes.

It costs $5,000 to build the scenery, let alone painting it: and the bill for properties, furniture and a thousand and one lesser details must also be remembered. And almost a moan when the manager tells you. "And after you've played all 25 weeks, if you're lucky enough to play that long, it's a case of throwing all those lovely clothes and throwing the lot." But, of course, you buy, berty to suspect, if you like, that, amortization of the piece having been made, its second dressing will not be quite so expensive.

Lingerie Gowns of the Season.

Already one feels the lure of the lingerie gown. Some, to be sure, have felt it right along, many girls wearing these dainty dresses for evening all winter. The new ones are really lovely. Batistes, fine lawns, gossamer muslins cambrics, the softest of linens, mousselines de soie, embroidered nets and lace are the materials of these dainty little frocks, and a new note this season is the intrbduction of several of these fabrics in the creation in a single frock.

A pretty style of frock, cut in the new seamless fashion, has a wide Claudine frill of the same material as the dress at the neck, edged with baby Irish lace.

White linen gowns with box-pleated waists and pleated skirts have turn down collars and turn-back cuffs of embroidered linen, also edged with Irish. A flowing tie of soft satin appears from beneath the Peter Pan collar, and very often a black patent-leather belt gives a smart finish.

The simple Broderie Anglaise frock, too, in the hands of a really clever artiste in dress, may become one of the smartest creations of the season. Such a gown was the exquiste Broderic Anglaise gown made recently for a celebrated Parisian actress.

A deep hem, over a foot wide, of lawn, hand-embroidered with bowknots, bordered the skirt of Broderie Anglaise, which was simply gathered into the waist with folds of cerise taffetas. The corsage and short loose sleeves were of the Broderie Anglaise, while the little turn-down collar was of hand-embroided lawn in the bow-knot design, outlined with narrow folds of black tulle—a truly Parisian touch. A narrow line of cerise taffetas encrusted with crushed pearls ran down the centre of the corsage in front, from the collar to the waistline. Thus treated, the Broderie Anglaise gown became a distinctive and orginal creation. Philadelphia Record.

One Who Came

A Memorial Day Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

She had been looking for him all through the warm spring, and now, late in May, she felt that he must come. Another week would bring the 30th of the month, and Memorial day with its tender observance of all the beloved dead, would come to crush down her cherished hope of Robert's return.

Esther looked wistfully across the pasture, and tears filled her blue eyes until hillside and pointed cedars were a dark blur.

When she had wiped them away some one was coming wearily down the narrow path—some one tall and thin, dressed in dark clothing, with a gray felt hat on his drooping head.

The man did not lift his eyes from the ground, but tramped steadily on, with his gaze fixed on the winding path under his feet. When the path ceased at the fence he looked up and saw Esther gazing at him longingly, lovingly, but there was no recollection in his glance, merely undisguised wonderment.

Esther's radiant smile faded as she searched the handsome face for some sign of recognition. It was Robert Webb, paler, thinner and curiously changed in expression, and yet it was Robert. A sudden terror filled her soul.

"Robert," she cried softly, "don't you know me?"

He stared curiously at her while a slow red burned into his thin cheeks. He lifted the gray hat and showed dark hair streaked plentifully with white.

"I am afraid you have made a mistake," he said in a deep, musical voice that was like Robert's own tones. "My name is Robert, but I am sure I would have remembered you if we had met before. I came to see Mr. Lane. I was directed to take the short cut across the lots from the station. Is this his farm?"

Esther shrank back.

"Yes, this is Mr. Lane's farm. You will find him at the house or barn. Take the path through the orchard."

With a murmured word of thanks the man replaced his hat, leaped the fence and disappeared in the gathering twilight of the orchard.

When Esther went into the house her fair hair was wet with dew, but her eyes were very bright and shining.

In the sitting room the were all gathered about the evening lamp. The light fell on the red table cover and was reflected in the comfortable furnishings of the room. Mr. Lane was reading the almanac with an interest quite unabated by a long winter's persual of its closely printed pages. Helen and Agatha were embroidering.

They all glanced up as Esther entered the room, blinking at the light.

"You'll catch your death out in the dampness, child," remonstrated her mother as Esther sat down in a low rocker beside her. "We've been wishing you'd come in and give us a little music."

"You promised to practice that duet with me, Esther," complained Helen. "I don't see why you want to run away every night after supper. You can't guess what's happened since you've been gone," she added teasingly.

The color leaped into Esther's pale cheeks. She struggled for a moment with her quickening breath before her words found utterance. "What has happened, Nell?" she asked, with assumed carelessness.

"Nothing at all," interposed Mrs. Lane, smiling, "except that father's tickled to death because he's got some one to help him all summer."

"Who is it?" asked Esther.

"A man who came here tonight. The station master sent him, knowing your father was put to it for help on the farm. He's young and willing, though he's a little out of health. He's been a soldier, and he wants to have a summer farming it to get back his health again."

"And likewise fill his pocketbook," yawned Farmer Lane, stretching himself luxuriously. "I guess we'll get along as well as may be. He's a fine, pleasant spoken young chap, but he's seen a sight of trouble, I take it. His hair's as white as my own. He's coming tomorrow."

"What is his name?" asked Esther in a muffled voice.

"Robert Munson. Looks like some one I've seen before. Can't think who it is to save my life," said her father, rising and filling his pipe at the mantelshelf.

With a quick movement Esther arose and was gone from the room.

"Father Lane," exclaimed Agatha in a stage whisper, "it's just come to me who this man looks like! He looks enough like Robert Webb to be his own brother!"

They cast startled glances at one another. "I declare if he doesn't!" gasped Mrs. Lane at last. "I hope Esther won't notice it. It would upset her terribly, pa."

"That may be," returned Mr. Lane decidedly. "Esther's mourned over Rob Webb jest two years longer than he was worth. If he'd cared anything for her he'd stayed behind and made a home for her instead of running off and joining the army as if he had no responsibilities at home. Essie better get used to seeing this new chap around. She's got to get cured of this grieving business, by George!"

The large brown fist struck the table with a force that startled the three women. They watched Mr. Lane march from the room with angry strides, and when the door had closed with an echoing slam their heads bent together in whispered consultation.

* * * * * * *

Memorial day was a holiday, and the Lanes usually spent it with relatives in an adjoining village. This day was no exception, and so it was quite early in the morning that they drove away in the comfortable surrey, leaving Robert Munson standing bareheaded by the wide white gate.

Esther had said nothing about going to the cemetery to place flowers on Robert's grave. She would wait until their return, and when the crowd had left the graveyard she would climb the hill and place her offering there, alone in the sunset.

When the long day was closing they came home again. Esther with her arms full of white blossoms gleaned from her aunt's garden. The new farm hand had taken advantage of the holiday and was nowhere to be seen, so Farmer Lane put up the horses and the others went indoors.

"I'll be back presently, mother," said Esther, tossing her hat on the table and gathering up her flowers. "I'm going to the cemetery now. Lion will come with me."

"Very well, dear," said Mrs. Lane.

Esther whistled to the dog and walked through the orchard to the pasture. Robert Munson was leaning on the fence, looking at the reflected lights on the distant hills.

"I am going up on the hill, Robert. Will you come along and carry my flowers?" asked Esther bravely.

"Certainly, Miss Esther," he said pleasantly, and so together they crossed the pasture and climbed the hill to the place where the tall white shaft made a memorial for the fallen soldier boy. All about the base beautiful flowers were strewn, and some one had placed a little flag in the green turf. Robert Munson was looking curiously at the inscription when Esther gently took the flowers from his grasp and dropped them on the ground at his feet. Then she placed her hands on his shoulders and looked into his eyes.

"Robert, Robert!" she cried tragically. "Don't you know me—won't you ever recognize me again?"

Very tenderly Robert Munson took her cold hands in his warm ones, and the firm pressure of his grasp seemed to give her wavering strength more courage.

"Miss Esther," he said gently, "whom do you take me for? Who do you think I am?"

"You are Robert Webb!" she cried eagerly. "See—this stone was erected for you. Your father died of a broken heart when you were killed, and your mother went away to live with her sister. I am here. I have not forgotten. See—I have kept your picture all these years. I have worn it always here." She drew away her hands and pulled a chain from her neck and opened a round locket. The picture therein was that of a young man, much younger than Robert Munson, and, while there was a resemblance, it might have been more in expression than in actual features.

"You have made a great mistake, Miss Esther," said Munson at last. "I am so sorry. I wish I knew what to say to you. I suppose you think the report of Webb's death was an error and that I am he, but it is not so." He stretched out a hand to support her wavering figure, but she leaned for support against the white marble. "I have seen service in the Philippines and I did know Bob Webb for a short time, and I know he was killed. I am sorry to have to tell you this. As for myself, I wanted a season in the country at hard work to recover my health. It is sheer chance that I came to Little River and was directed to your father's farm. I have parents and brothers and sisters in Boston—in fact, I am afraid I can prove only too well that I am not Robert Webb." He looked down at her with infinite pity in his fine eyes—a pity that was so akin to something warmer that she seemed to feel it infold her like a comforting garment.

"I am so sorry I have annoyed you. What must you think of me? You see"— Esther broke down and sobbed bitterly, and Robert Munson stood beside her with a friendly hand pressing her shoulder. It was with his handkerchief that Esther wiped away her tears, while he knelt down and deftly strewed the flowers she had brought about the foot of the shaft. Then he rose to his tall height and held out his hand.

"Come, Miss Esther; let us go back home again. There are light and life beyond as well as here. We who are left behind have our work to do in the world. I'm a clumsy fellow at expressing myself, but try to look on the bright side of things."

It was a quiet walk home again across the pasture and through the orchard, and it proved to be many a long day before Esther took the same route again. There seemed to be a veil lifted after that day. Life was brighter, better, and love seemed not to be the hopeless thing she had one time believed.

When another later day came and another Robert told his love by the orchard fence the swallows dipped in the pale light, and the bats darted from the shadows, and the song that the whippoorwill sang seemed a paean of joy, and the whole world was bathed in a rosy light that was not the reflection from the sunset.

Too Much Hustle.

Senator Tillman discussing railway wrecks, says the Washington Star, decried the extreme hurry of railroads which he said is an unpardonable as the case of Si Taylor:

"At Si Taylor's funeral the doctor and the undertaker were conversing in low tones.

"'Too bad,' said the undertaker, 'that poor Si's wife wasn't with him when he passed away. How did it happen?'

"'Mrs. Taylor,' the doctor whispered, 'was up town at the time ordering her mourning outfit.'

"The undertaker, with a bitter smile, turned away to supervise the funeral precession.

"'Hold on, gentlemen; this won't do,' he said sternly. "Where is the sixth pallbearer?'

"'He's upstairs,' another pallbearer explained, proposing to the widder.'"

Get Together.

A good, healthy scrap brings men more closely together than anything else in the world, unless it should be a convention of mothers-in-law.

At the recent primaries the Republicans were divided on the question of the candidacy of Charles E. Patton and Lewis Emery for nomination for Congress. Mr. Patton won, Mr. Emery lost. They both couldn't win. Mr. Patton received a decisive majority of the Republican vote in Centre County and also in the district and he is thus the party nominee. As such he is entitled to the vote of every Republican in November.

Vigorous as it was at some points, the rivalry for the nomination was entirely free from personalities and ill feeling. The activity of the Emery forces made the supporters of Patton get up and hustle and as a consequence fully fifty per cent of the Republican vote was polled at the primaries. The Emery people made their biggest and most successful stand in Bellefonte Borough, winning the West and South wards, but losing the North by a margin greater than that of the two other wards combined.

The time to fight it out is before and not after the primaries. This is what the Patton and Emery forces did on Saturday and the result was that the strife of the opposing elements did not cause so much as a dent in Republican party harmony. This is as it should be. Now it is time that all Republicans should get together in support of the ticket and a glorious victory in November.

A Democratic Insult.

Before the primaries the Democrats worked actively in support of Mr. Emery and openly stated that they preferred his nomination on the Republican ticket rather than that of Mr. Patton.

Since the primaries these same Democrats are saying that they are glad Mr. Emery was defeated and that they would rather make the fight against Patton. No matter how one looks at this quick shift of the Democrats it bears all the earmarks of a deliberate and intentional insult for these Republicans who were sincere in their advocacy of Mr. Emery's nomination.

Sounds Just Like Bill.

Before the primaries Bill Heinle, the Democratic nominee for Congress, said he couldn't see anything but Emery for the Republican nomination. Since Saturday's cold wave for Emery, Bill says that he would rather make the fight against Patton than against Emery. Now doesn't that sound just like Bill?

One Daily Dead; Another Planned.

Editor Fred Dunham, after threatening for several weeks to do it, on Saturday, last, announced the suspension of the Bellefonte Daily. Lack of support, both subscribers and advertisers, was given by him as the reason for the painless death of the seven months old newspaper. It is understood that Miss Mary Kelly will shortly start a new daily, which will be published in Bellefonte and given the title of the Bellefonte Daily Times. Here's wishing luck to the prospective paper.

All the Accessories.

William T. Stead, the editor of Review of Reviews, tells the story of an Irishman who applied to one of his friends for a position as coachman, according to a story in Judge.

"'You know, Pat, if I engage you I shall expect you to do things by combination. For instance, if I tell you to bring the carriage 'round at a given time I shall expect the horses with it and driving gloves, etc.'

"'Yes, sorr,' said Pat.

"He was duly engaged and gave satisfaction. One day his master came to him to go for a doctor, as his mistress was ill. Pat was gone for a long time, and on his master grumbling at him for his delay, he said, 'Sure they're all here, sorr.'

"'All here?' said the master. What do you mean?'

"'Didn't you tell me to do things by combination?'

"'What's that got to do with it? said the master.

"'Well,' said Pat 'I've got the doctor, the parson and the undertaker.'"

Will Operate Ice Cream Wagon.

Toner Hugg, of Milesburg, who recently installed an ice cream manufacturing plant, at Milesburg, will on Saturday, next, put an ice cream wagon on the road. It is his intention to have his wagon visit Bellefonte and all other towns within a radius of six miles of Milesburg. After he is able to work out a delivery system it is Mr. Hugg's intention to have his wagon visit certain towns on fixed days.

Moving Books.

Many persons complain that their books suffer in transit. The head of a moving company was interviewed on this subject, and he said: "After several years' experimenting with different things for the best conveyance of books I have found that the use of small boxes is by far the most advisable, the smaller the better. These boxes are easily secured for a few cents from your grocer. For storage purposes, where the matter is left to us, we move books in long, narrow boxes fitted with handles made especially for this purpose, but this is not necessary, of course, for the ordinary moving. Barrels simply ruin books, and large boxes filled with heavy volumes have caused more than one strike among our men. They are the clumsiest of all things to handle, as well as the heaviest."

Another mode of moving books is to tie them up in small bundles with stout wrapping paper and heavy twine, leaving enough of the twine to make a loop handle for lifting.—New Idea Woman's Magazine.

Why the Vases Were Valuable.

There's a china expert in one of the large department stores here who has an amusing little trade of his own on the side. It is nothing more or less than deciding the value of rare china or glass ware broken by careless servants or packing houses.

"It requires a lot of diplomacy, too," he said, with a laugh. "Not so very long ago I was called in to arbitrate between an irate householder and one of the big moving firms. She said with sobs that the movers had broken a pair of vases which she valued at $100. The movers, although willing to make restitution, considered the sum exorbitant. Well, I looked at the pieces and found the value about $25. I told the woman so quietly. 'I know that,' she sobbed, 'but they belonged to my mother-in-law, and my husband will think I made the men do it purposely unless I get a lot for them.'

"And it was not until the men had promised to prove they had done it accidentally that the lady was content to accept the $25."—Philadelphia Times.

Japan's Giant Wrestlers.

Japanese wrestlers are not to be confused with Japanese exponents of jiu jitsu. The wrestlers belong to the older school, in which weight is a paramount quality. It is a remarkable thing that a race which is on the average four or five inches under the European standard in point of height should have produced a special cult of wrestlers who are giants in stature and strength. The leading wrestlers of Tokyo or Osaka or Hiogo are all men at least six feet in height and weighing perhaps 300 pounds. They are a race apart. Wrestling is an occupation which has been handed down from father to son for many generations. And the explanation of their prowess is that they have always been meat eaters, while the rest of Japan, either from choice or necessity, have been in the main vegetarians.

Diamonds Under Water.

An imitation diamond is never so brilliant as a genuine stone. If your eye is not experienced enough to detect the difference, a very simple test is to place the stone under water. The imitation stone is practically extinguished, while a genuine diamond sparkles even under water and is distinctly visible. When possible, place a genuine stone beside the possible imitation under water, and the contrast will be apparent to the least experienced eyes.

Consistent Theory.

"Don't you believe the husband is the head of the house and should have the final say?"

"Certainly I do."

"Then why don't you come out in the open and say so?"

"Because my wife won't let me."—Exchange.

Noted Gambling Den Closed Forever.

Dick Canfield's famous Saratoga club house was emptied of its gambling paraphernalia last week and a carload of roulette wheels, faro tables and poker chips were shipped away to a destination no authority wanted to divulge, but which is generally believed to be Mexico. After the final table had been removed from the club house the doors and windows were nailed up and inquirers were given to understand that Canfield would never make an attempt to open the place again.

The club house was made famous years ago by Morrissey and Spencer, later passing to other hands and finally to Canfield, who spent $500,000 on the grounds and a new restaurant. For several years the authorities dealt leniently with him and he was permitted to run when other places of a similar kind were shut up. Three years ago, however, he was told that he would have to take the tables from the big gaming room on the first floor. He immediately replied by offering the property for sale. Since that time gambling apparatus has remained in the building, but for two seasons the restaurant and house have been shut tight.

Tour to Yellowstone Park and the Canadian Rockies

In the heart of the Rock Mountains lies one of nature's richest treasure-houses—the Yellowstone National Park. It is America's greatest show ground. To visit this Park is to see nature in a variety of rare and majestic moods.

The Canadian Rockies, glorious in scenery, displaying new wonders in every mile as one penetrates the great canyons through which the railroad runs, combine the beauty of the Alps and the grandeur of the Himalayas.

On August 15, a personally-conducted tour through the Yellowstone Park; to Portland and Seattle, and returning through the Canadian Rockies, will leave the East by special train over the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Five and one-half days will be spent in the Park, one day in Portland, one day in Seattle, one day on Puget Sound, going by steamer from Seattle to Vancouver, part of a day at Vancouver, one day at Laggan, one day at Banff, and sight-seeing trips will be made in St. Paul and Chicago. The tour will cover a period of twenty-one days.

The rate will cover all necessary expenses.

Persons desiring to utilize this exceptional opportunity to visit the Yellowstone Park and the Canadian Rockies, should apply for Pullman space early, as the party will be limited. Address Jas. P. Anderson, D. P. A., Pittsburg, or Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed conditions mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Mrs. James Wagner died at the home of Henry Weaver, in Liberty township, last Wednesday evening about five o'clock. She was age about 74 years and had always been a resident of this community, having until recently made her home with Burdine Butler. The funeral took place Friday forenoon and interment was made in the Wagner cemetery.

The Ladies Aid of the Fairview Evangelical church will hold an ice cream and cake festival at the church next Saturday evening. Other refreshments will also be served and the usual pleasant evening is assured. All are invited to attend.

Cut worms have made their appearance here in large numbers and their work is telling on the corn and some of the other crops. They are also found in many of the gardens and are cutting off many of the young plants.

Last Friday and Saturday evenings an itinerant moving picture show held forth here and gave a liberal display of up-to-date pictures that usually go with this popular form of amusement. It is the expectation to return again next Friday and Saturday.

One day last week while Mrs. John Weber was ironing, her youngest child was severely burned. Mrs. Weber had gone to the stove to get a hot iron and seeing that it was properly heated left it swing to her side as one naturally would. Just as her arm swung down the child walked up behind its mother unknown to her and the point of the iron struck the child in the eye. The burn was very painful and it is feared that the sight may be seriously injured if the child is not made totally blind.

With last Saturday's issue Editor Dunham discontinued the publication of the Bellefonte Daily, after having had a seven months' eventful career. Mr. Dunham's reasons for discontinuing were clearly set forth and it is to be regretted that the good people of Bellefonte would permit the embryo journal to suffer the pangs of fiduciary delinquency, but such has been the fate of many another newspaper enterprise:

No more shall the sheet circulate,
Or its newsy columns be read;
Just because it did not compensate,
The Bellefonte Daily now is dead;
Under the ban of no pay,
Waiting for what is due;
Under skies that were gray,
Made the editor blue.

An interesting and appropriate Children's Day exercises were held in the Christian chapel Sunday evening under the auspices of the Sunday school. The program consisted of songs, drills, exercises and recitations, the parts being made up by members of the school. All acquitted themselves admirably and a special male quartet composed of Messrs. A. A. Pletcher, Samuel Kling, Chester Moore and Philip Holter added much to the evening's exercises. The special collection amounted to $16.50 and the same will be applied to one of the branches of the church work. Inclement weather somewhat reduced the attendance which is usually the capacity of the church. The complete program would occupy too much space here.

Mrs. Wm. Gordon and daughter and Walter Holter visited relatives in Unionville on Saturday.

The regular monthly session of the borough council was held Monday, with the following members present, A. A. Schenck, C. M. Fox, H. T. McDowell, Wm. N. Neff, and Charles Pletcher. The street committee reported walks laid and other walks and some streets in need of repairs. Charles Yearick asked for a grade for a new walk in front of the Reformed church. The committee also reported that Mr. Welch was going to lay a new walk. The water committee reported that the reservoir wall was leaking. The nuisance committee reported that live stock was being killed in the borough. On motion the secretary was instructed to notify the party not to do any more killing within the borough. H. T. McDowell reported that N. B. Spangler had been employed as attorney for this year. The question of filling the low places in some of the streets was discussed and on motion it was decided that the street committee should act to the best of their judgment in the matter of filling up the uneven places. On motion it was decided, in accordance with the ordinance relating to the same, to permit the use of fireworks from 12 o'clock on the night of the 3rd of July until 11 o'clock on the night of the 4th. Bills to the amount of $14.60 were read and ordered paid.

The reorganization of the school board took place at their meeting on Monday. The retiring members were J. F. Condo and W. H. Holter. The new members, Joseph Schenck and John Mokle, were sworn in. The board was then organized by electing H. C. Holter president, C. H. Pletcher, secretary, and Dr. W. J. Kurtz treasurer. Other matters of a routine nature were disposed of. Several applications for schools have been received, and these will likely be taken up at the next meeting. The school finances are in good shape.

For the first time in 42 years, James Snyder, of Witchita, Kansas, is visiting his brothers, Charles and Henry, at White Hall. Father Time has dealt most gently with him. Although his locks are silvered he is quite brisk and hale and hearty. In Kansas he is engaged in truck farming on a small scale. While here he is anxious to meet as many of his old associates as possible.

You don't want to miss the farmers meeting in the I. O. O. F. hall on Saturday evening, next. Admission free.

Cal. Trostle, wife and family spent Saturday and Sunday at the Philip and John Werts home, at Houserville.

Two hundred and eighty-six dollars were realized at the festival held at Boalsburg on the evening of Decorrtion Day.

Miss Lillian Dale is arranging to accompany her brother, Howard, to his home, at Rushville, Nebraska, where she hopes to recover her shattered health caused by the death of her father, the late George Dale.

Weaver and Murray Whitmer, two young sports of Buffalo Run, are having a rollicking time among friends here this week.

N. B. Spangler, one of Bellefonte's legal lights, transacted business in town on Thursday, last.

W. D. Port has been appointed health officer, W. H. Koush resigned.

A reception was given Professor M. E. Heberling and his bride, on their return from their wedding tour on Tuesday, at the J. G. Heberling home, on Main Street. The calithumpians were on deck.

The Reformed church choir picnic was held in the grove of Ezra Tressler, near Rock Springs, on Saturday, last, and a delightful time was had by all present. The visitors included Mr. and Mrs. Warren Ingram, of Seven Stars; Miss Clare Bathurst, of Spruce Creek; Ned Keller and Miss Ruth Weiland, of Linden Hall, and Mrs. Hutchinson and two children of Juniata, and Rev. A. A. Black, of Boalsburg.

A number of every fine vocal and instrumental musical selections were rendered by Mr. Keller, Mr. Tressler and Mrs. Denton Peterson, of Rock Springs.

Runville.

Don't forget the two festivals at Runville; July 1 and 2. Everybody cordially invited to attend.

Mrs. Grey Ardery, of Clovedale, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Watkins.

Mrs. Claude Lucas and children have returned to their home in Snow Shoe.

Eve Lucas and wife, of Altoona, are guests at the Charles Lucas home.

An open air festival by Ojobuay Tribe, No. 476, I. O. R. M., of Milesburg, will be held at Yarnell, July 9. Refreshments of all kinds will be served by the Indian chief and his warriors. A royal time is in store for all who attend.

Bastismal services will be held in our village, on July 10. Children's Day services will be held in the United Brethren church, on June 26.

William Watson, of Tyrone, spent Sunday with his wife and little son here.

Pine Glenn.

Vandorn Meeker, who is employed at Penfield, came home to visit friends and also attend the primaries.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kein, formerly of Winburne, are visiting Mrs. Kein's father, Jefferson Force, who is still very ill.

Mrs. H. G. Hoover and family spent a few days at Moshannon last week, visiting Mrs. Hoover's mother, Mrs. Lucy Cramer.

Some of our young men attended the festival at Karthaus on Saturday night.

Children's Day will be observed in the Methodist Episcopal church on Sunday, June 19, instead of the 15th.

Little Charles Wagner, of Bellefonte, is visiting Grandmother Beates. He seems to enjoy farm life in the summer better than the town and he always comes to the "Glenn" as soon as school is over. A grandmother is about one of the very nicest things in the world, anyway.

Theodore Boak, of Hughesville, was a caller at the Boak home recently.

M. Ellen Loy was a Bellefonte visitor a few days this week.

There will be a festival at the hall on Saturday night for the benefit of the Methodist Episcopal church. Ice cream, cake, candies and other delicacies will be served. Everybody cordially invited.

Rhoda Askey is visiting her sister, Mrs. William Steele, Jr., at Bellefonte.

Miss Lizzie Conaway is home for her summer vacation, after a very successful millinery season at Winburne.

While in the "Glenn" last Sunday morning the stork left a little son to bless the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fye, and a cute little daughter at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meeker. Congratulations.

Mt. Eagle.

Solomon Tice shipped a carload of paper wood this week to the Lock Haven mills.

Leonard Leathers returned to Brookville on Tuesday but Mrs. Leathers and the children remained over for another week.

Some repairs to the engine necessitated shutting down the handle factory for a few days.

William Gates and Clair Butler on Tuesday, started for West Virginia, in search of employment.

The farmers here are complaining that the cut worm is destroying the corn and also the vegetables.

William Shank, of Indiana county, spent Sunday here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Shank.

Mr. and Mrs. Al. Strickland spent Sunday with Mrs. Gummo, at Lock Haven.

John Miller went to Tyrone on Sunday. He is working in the forge, which recently resumed operations after a long idleness.

Rev. B. C. Connor expected to preach in the Kennedy Methodist Episcopal church on Sunday afternoon, but the rain disappointed both the people and the Elder, Mr. Connor is the District Superintendent.

Aunt Martha Packer is busy between showers these days painting her front yard fence, which makes quite a pretty appearance and adds much to the beauty of the surroundings.

Mrs. George Gates, of Nittany Valley, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Martin Gates.

James Reeder has secured a nice job with the brick works at Hays Run. Stick to it, Jim, old boy.

Burgess George Leathers, of Howard, was a visitor to his farm early Monday morning.

Milesburg.

The Epworth League will hold an ice cream social on the Water Street lawice on Saturday evening, June 18. Cake and other delicacies will also be served and are invited.

James Noll, of Tyrone, spent Sunday with his parents, Mrs. and Mr. George Noll.

Mrs. Joseph Grofmeyer spent the week with friends at Tyrone.

Clay and Ralph Shope and Charles Zimmerman have gone to Massachusetts, where they have secured employment.

Miss Catharine Austin and Miss Eva Kline spent Memorial Day among friends at Boalsburg.

Dr. and Mrs. S. M. Huff have returned home from Philadelphia.

Scotia.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marshall, of Houserville, spent Friday at the home of Calvin Murtorff.

Miss Raybold, of Warriors-Mark, has fitted up a room in the Roop house, where she has a fine display of millinery and is doing quite a business.

Max Kirkpatrick, of Mt. Union, was a Sunday visitor at the Haugh home. Max has been visiting Scotia quite frequently of late, but then you can't blame him.

The primaries were fairly well attended. There were fifty-six Republicans voted and only two lost their nerve and voted for Emery. When it comes to straight men you can find old Patton township up in the head of the class. We have no time for a sidestepper, at either the primaries or the general election.

Thomas Haugh, who spent the last four years at State Collge, is home for a few days, having finished his work and now waiting for his sheepskin. He expects to locate in East Pittsburg and work in the Westinghouse shops.

Miss Ina Cronemiller returned home on Friday from an extended visit with friends in Tyrone and Altoona.

Scotia was well represented at Waddles on Saturday night. One young man had company down but came home by himself. Did you ever get left, Chester?

John Johnstonbaugh has decided that there would be more pleasure for him with an automobile than with a horse and buggy. He says that he has a good offer to exchange and is seriously thinking of doing so. Go ahead, John, an auto won't eat corn at 90c a bushel.

MILLIONS GO HUNGRY

Professor Hopkins Says Dark Ages Still Exist in Russia and India.

History tells us that Roman agriculture declined until a bushel of seed brought only four bushels in the harvest, declined until the high civilization of the Mediterranean coutries passed into the dark ages which covered the earth for a thousand years, until the discovery of a new world brought new supplies of food, renewed prosperity, and new life and light to western Europe; but the dark ages still exist for most of our own Aryan race in Russia and in India, where as an average, day by day, and year by year, more people are hungry than live in the United States, where the average wage of a man is fifty cents a month, where famine rages always, and where the price of wheat sometimes rises to a point where six month's wages of a working man are required to buy one bushel. The is the condition where the absolute needs of the population exceed the food supply; and just so sure as the inteligent and influential men women of America continue to ignore and the material foundation upon which national prosperity depends, just so sure will future dark ages blot out American civilization.-Professor Cyril G. Hopkins, of the University of Illinois, in Science.

Held Teachers' Examination.

Twenty-two applicants for teachers' provisional certificates participated in an examination, held on Friday last at the Midway school, by County Superintendent D. O. Etters. At an examination held the previous day at Centre Hall the class of participants numbered 40.

JUNE ON THE GREAT LAKES

Restful, delightful, interesting, and instructive, there is no trip like that on the Great Lakes, those inland seas which form the border line between the United States and Canada. And June is one of the most charming months in the year in which to take the trip.

For comfort the fine passenger steamships of the Anchor Line have no superiors. As well-appointed as the palatial ocean greyhounds which plow the Atlantic, their schedule allows sufficient time at all stopping places to enable the traveler to see something of the great lake cities and to view in daylight the most distinctive sights of the lakes, and the scenery which fames them.

The trip through the Detroit river, and through Lake St. Clair, with its great ship canal in the middle of the lake, thence through Lake Huron, the locking of the steamer through the great locks at the Soo, and the passage of the portage Entry, lake and canal, across the upper end of Michigan are novel and interesting features.

The voyage from Buffalo to Duluth covers over eleven hundred miles in five days' journey. Leaving Buffalo the steamships Juniata, Tionesta and Octorara, make stops at Erie, Cleveland, Detroit, Mackinac Island, the Soo. Marquette, Houghton, Hancock and Duluth.

The 1910 season opened on May 31, when the Steamer Tionesta made her first sailing from Buffalo.

The Anchor Line is the Great Lake Annex of the rennsylvania Railroad, and the service measures up to the high standard set by the "Standard Railroad of America."

An illustrated folder, giving sailing dates of steamers, rates of fare, and other information is in course of preparation, and may be obtained when read yfrom any rennsylvania Railroad Ticket Agent, who is also prepared to book passengers who may desire to take this trip through the Great Lakes and back.

Advice for Engaged Maids.

Etiquette is out of fashion. We have put it away with the little books our grandmothers used, "Rules of Conduct," and such like. In some ways it is rather a pity, especially where engaged folk are concerned. When they had to—well, they did. When they haven't to—well, they don't. And mothers-in-law, sisters-in-law, aunts and cousins-in-law, and all the other relations-in-law, are considerably ruffled thereby. "Etiquette may be dead," they say, "but surely good manners are not buried also?"

That depends upon the couple. Occasionally there is a resurrection, but as a rule "Let sleeping dogs lie" is the motto. It is foolish, really, for the same dogs may be used bye and bye. More friends are alienated during engagements than at any other time.

However, friends do not matter much. It is the relatives that count. And this is where the etiquette book comes in.

Under such guidance the girl learns that she must treat his people as if they were her own (the man generally does his part, at least for a time). She finds out that mothers-in-law have "feelings" and she is directed not to flaunt her triumph in their face.

She must be careful not to interfere with former habits, and be very tactful in suggesting innovations.

"Dear me! How tiresome!" is the engaged girl's comment. "Fancy not being able to do as one likes!"

That is the curse of the modern girl, she does what she likes. Selfishness is the root-cause of all engagement troubles. There would be no need for books on etiquette if engaged people would study their neighbors.

They are deliciously unselfish where "he" or "she" is concerned, but they completely forget that "they" exist, or if they do remember, it is with the wish that they would "get off the earth." Of course what a man sows that shall he reap; and if engaged people push everyone out of their world bye and bye they will have it to themselves, and naturally when they've got what they want, they no longer want it. And then what happens?

Usually one of them wanders off the globe in search of the others, and the one who is left is lonely and hurt.

Etiquette, even in engagements, not only blesses those who get but those who give away.

One might almost say that our grandmothers knew a thing or two, if it were not disrespectful.

In home and social life generally gossip should be feared as an enemy, and not be tolerated as a welcome guest. It is ever so much safer and better to talk of things rather than persons, thus preventing that enemy, ill-natured gossip, from coming in.

Make it a rule, and let it be strictly observed, not to say anything about the faults of another unless there is absolute necessity for you to do so. This necessity may arise, and your own judgment can guide you about the matter.

But where it can be avoided, do not talk of the faults or evil doings of others. Why, indeed, should you do so? You know yourself that you have faults, few or many, and that there are many things you may have done which you prefer should not be repeated. Well, then, exercise the same charity to others that you would have extended to yourself.

Another thing to bear in mind is that, if you talk of what is to the disadvantage of another, what you say will doubtless be repeated. Of course, you may preface your remarks by: "This is quite between ourselves." "Pray do not repeat it." But why should you imagine that your addresses will be silent about that which you cannot keep to yourself? She may forget her promise, or may not consider it very binding.

Then, too, when things are repeated they never lose in the telling. Something is taken from or added to the original story, and if repeated several times it loses very often most of its original character. The most terrible mischief is caused by gossip of this kind. Friends are separated, relations are estranged, quarrels are set up, "bad blood" is made, simply because something said, perhaps thoughtlessly, on the impulse of the moment, is repeated. Philadelphia Inquirer.

Using Last Year's Wardrobe.

The woman who is restricted as to dress expenditure is certainly having things made easy for her since the Paris houses are turning out their smartest models in combinations of two and sometimes three or more materials. Any showing of new gowns or suits testifies to this, and if it were not for the danger of maligning ideas that in effect are most attractive, one might use the term patchwork in describing them.

Think of the chance of making over an old frock when thin fabrics as an outside veiling are so much used. It is the day of the foulard gown, yet it is rare to see one without a tunic and waist overlay of chiffon or voile.

Take, therefore, your last year's frock and look it boldly in the face, for with good handling it will come out like new. Say that you have the standard dark blue, dotted in white. Get to cover it plain dark blue voile, which in a thin quality is quite as transparent as chiffon cloth and wears far better.

A simple fashion that is popular is a Russian blouse tunic. This is cut around the waist in straight widths, gathered ever so lightly on to a belt two inches wide of dark blue satin or taffeta. Facings of the same are carried around the bottom of the skirt and up the front opening, which is placed a little to the left. The blouse is usually neither tucked nor plaited, and shaped with a round neck and cap sleeves that reach about to the elbow. Put an edge of silk or satin around these also.

Such a tunic will disguise any half-worn look or unfortunate spots or discolorations and give an up-to-date touch to a frock that otherwise one might have discarded. This model is the simplest of the many that one may utilize for such purposes, and it is varied in a number of ways.

One blue and white foulard had blue voile for the top, with cone-shaped ornaments or buttons in a straight row on the lower edge and used to hold up the blouse in points on the shoulders. With this there is a patent leather belt.

If the Russian blouse is not becoming, make a tunic that hangs in a slantwise drapery across the front of the skirt. With this, to trim the waist, provided it is not a bunchy model that will be too thick if so treated, bring a broad band of chiffon over each shoulder, with two wide tucks laid in. Have a folded soft girdle of chiffon and an oblong buckle covered with it.

Not only are foulards used as foundation for various transparencies, but so also is every other sort of silk imaginable. Scarcely a wardrobe that does not include among its collection some sort of thin taffeta, louisine or oriental silk that has served as an afternoon or theatre gown. Unless actually in rags, these can all be doctored up with thin veilings to cover their sins.

Such a pretty model that would serve to go by is gray and white, long and cut plain and circular with a finely striped summer silk. The skirt is long and cut plain and circular with a seam up the front, the bodice is a simple, easy-fitting blouse without tucks, running up into a pointed yoke and high collar of English thread lace.

Over this there is a loose coat of French blue silk voile. It is embroidered in soutache in a geometrical pattern arranged in a straight border. From the shoulders the material hangs rather full and is not shaped in, but is caught close at the waist by being tacked to the silk beneath. Under the arms the sides of the coat meet and are held together by straps of soutache. Below the braid at the hem there is a straight band of matching taffeta silk, scarcely fuller than the underskirt into which the voile is gathered, and allowed to blouse over it a bit.

This is an attractive arrangement on a slim figure, but it is not to be thought of by any one who is at all stout.—Phila. Evening Times.

Too Much For Her.

"The newest laws of hygiene," said a medical man, "can't be inculcated save among those who thoroughly understand them. Take the case of Dash.

"Dash, a rich country scientist, decided to encourage cremation among the villagers. So when the old ash man died Dash urged his widow to have the corpse cremated.

"'No, sir,' said the old woman, 'I'll not cremate him. I'll put him under the sod.'

"'But the cremation won't cost you a cent,' said Dash. 'I'll pay all the expenses if you'll let me have him cremated.'

"'Well, I agree,' said the old woman in a hesitating voice. 'I'm too poor not to agree, sir.' Then she gave Dash a puzzled look, half of pity, half of contempt.

"'But why do you do it, sir?' she said. 'Is it a hobby like golf or stamp collectin'?'"—Washington Star.

The Author's Grievance.

The magazine editor looked up.

"I want to protest, sir," said the caller, "against the way in which one of your reckless proofreaders mangled my copy. See here. The judge in the story looks down at the detective. 'Are you Pendleton King?' he asks, and the detective, removing his beard, replies, 'I am.' Now, just see what your proofreader made him say."

The editor glanced at the line and read it aloud:

"The detective, removing his beard, replies, 'I a. m.'"

The unhappy author groaned.

"Where does that leave the readers?" he demanded.

The editor slowly smiled.

"At 1 a. m. they are naturally left in the dark," he replied. "Take an extra chapter and get them out of it."

The author suddenly laughed.

"Happy thought!" he cried. "I will."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Why They Smiled.

It was the Sabbath day, and the elder was shaving himself prior to church time when he made a slight cut with the razor on the extreme end of his nose. Calling his wife, he asked her if she had any court plaster.

"You will find some in my sewing basket," she said.

The elder soon had the cut covered. At church in assisting with the collection he noticed every one smile as he passed the plate. Very much annoyed, he asked one of his assistants if there was anything wrong with his appearance.

"I should say there was," answered the assistant. "What is that upon your nose?"

"Court plaster."

"No," said his friend; "it is the label from a reel of cotton. It says, 'Warranted 200 yards.'"—Pearson's.

Milady's Mirror

"If we are to believe the scientists," says a writer in a recent magazine, "the brunettes will inherit the earth and the blonds will dwindle away. All over the world they tell us the brunettes are increasing faster than their light faced and blue eyed brothers and sisters. Even in Germany, the land of the Saxon, the old Teutonic face is changing and the flaxen poll is giving place to the brown head. In England we hear the same complaint, and in France the old Frankish blond is so rare that light hair and eyes are at a decided premium. The blond is dwindling so fast that you can actually see him dwindle.

"Now, according to Charles F. Woodruff, surgeon and major in the United States army, the same thing is happening in America. Dr. Woodruff states that the blonds are losing out in the struggle for existence and are filling our jails and almshouses. He attributes this deplorable fact to an excess of sunlight, which the sensitive blond cannot endure.

"The few remaining blonds in the world who read these lines will doubtless regret that they were not born in the dark ages, when there was 'no excess of sunlight.' But we do not despair, for we believe that American ingenuity once embarked on a conservation policy will manage to preserve this last great resource of ours, the American blond."

Aids to Health and Beauty.

Yawning, except in polite society, should be indulged in rather than repressed. The reason why? A good, free, unrestricted yawn counteracts the effect of laughing. Just stop and think how often we laugh and how seldom—comparatively—we yawn. The muscles are stretched in one direction while laughing, and by constant repetition little lines are formed around the corners of the mouth. Yawning stretches these same muscles in exactly the opposite direction and therefore tends to undo the mischief caused by our good humor.

Yawn, but don't stop laughing, or you will be like the woman who, at an advanced age, had not a line or wrinkle in her face, but whose countenance was entirely expressionless. Dreading these same lines and wrinkles, she had all her life schooled her features to express nothing of joy or sorrow.

Character In the Mouth.

A large, shapely mouth signifies breadth of mind and toleration of others' peculiarities.

Thin lips denote covetousness, greed, selfishness, and, unless strongly contradicted by some other feature, intense love of power.

The more curved and flexible the lips the more yielding the nature; the more straight and firm the lips the more severe the nature. Lips that look as if they had been pressed into a straight line show self repression, nervousness and obstinacy.

A mouth to be perfect should be large and shapely, the corners straight or very slightly inclined to droop; lips neither thick nor thin and firmly but easily closed.

Old Time Skin Tonic.

A simple tonic for the skin at this time of the year is often necessary and beneficial to give tone and clearness to the complexion. The following old fashioned lotion, which is said to date from the time of Queen Elizabeth, may be safely used, even for the most sensitive skins: To half a pint of elder flower water add, drop by drop, stirring all the time to prevent the lotion from curdling, two drams of simple tincture of benzoin, then add six drops of tincture of myrrh and a teaspoonful of glycerin. The lotion can be used two or three times a day and will be found exceptionally cooling and refreshing to the skin.

Girls and Their Hair.

Athletic girls should make a point of being so trigly put together that they do not fall to pieces in the stress of play or feel afraid that they may do so. Men sometimes scornfully say that girls cannot play games with an undivided mind because half of their gray matter is taken up with anxiety lest their hair is falling down, an anxiety so keen that their hands are forever going hairward to adjust slipping pins. Now, that is an aspersion which all athletic girls should resent, and they should make such comment impossible by arranging unruly locks in such a way that no further thought of them is necessary.

Don't Rub the Eyes.

Never rub the eyes, for this practice causes inflammation of the lids, and, however beautiful the expression, if the eyes are red or without lashes they lose their charm. When a foreign substance gets into the eye do not irritate it by trying to force it out. Keep the eye closed for a few moments or until the object is removed by the tears which will flow. If, however, it is impossible to remove the substance yourself have some one who will perform the operation carefully remove it for you.

A SMALL BIRD.

But It Had a Mighty Swat When It Came Down Dead.

W. M. Newson tells of an amusing incident in which a dead duck displayed more activity than would a live one. The incident is as follows:

"We saw a small flock of broadbills approaching. They came directly for us, but unfortunately did not stop for our decoys. As they arrived almost over us we stood up and fired. I pulled on a nice plump looking drake. He started to fall, so I turned my second load loose rather promiscuously and then started to load up. Behind me Johnny was still shooting. Then Johnny yelled, and something hit me a mighty swat on the back of my neck, whereupon I tried to clean a big hunk of stone of its barnacles by means of my nose and front teeth. This may be pleasant to look upon, but it is not an enjoyable pastime.

"I had always liked Johnny, but the thought that he had hit me on the back of the neck and was now laughing was too much. I started for him with murder in my eye and a large driftwood stick in my hand. Johnny, still in fits of laughter, pointed behind me and mumbled some words about 'duck.' I looked around, and there behind me on the rocks was the same plump looking drake that I had shot at the first time. It was hard to realize that such a small bird had such a mighty swat.

"When Johnny had come out of his convulsions and I had picked the feathers out of my back hair we looked around a bit and found there were four dead broadbills, so I cheered up a bit. Johnny didn't need any cheering up."—Recreation.

HE WAS THANKFUL.

A Reporter Who Appreciated the Attentions of His Superior.

A reporter for a Philadelphia newspaper was sent up the state to act as staff correspondent in an important court trial. It was the reporter's first big out of town assignment, and his managing editor kept the telegraph wires busy with instructions and inquiries. For two days and two nights the reporter had received a dispatch from his office half hourly, and it began to get on his nerves.

At the end of the second day he worked until 2 o'clock in the morning, filed his last page of copy, received word that his story had been received, and he went to bed. Just as he was putting out the light the hotel porter appeared with the inevitable tray and the inevitable telegram. The reporter opened it and read:

"What time does court open in the morning?"

It was too much. He hated the sight of a telegram. He had been fleeing the curse of the dispatches only to have them pursue him to bed. He sat down and wrote to his office the most courteous answer he could compose:

"Court opens at 9 o'clock in the morning. It is now 3. Thank you for waking me in time."—Philadelphia Times.

Balzac's Way.

Jules Sandeau relates that one time while living in Paris Balzac locked himself up in his room for twenty-two days and twenty-two nights, refusing to see any one and keeping the curtains closed and the lights continually burning even in broad daylight. The only human being he saw during this time was his servant, whom he rang for when he felt the need of food and which he washed down with numerous cups of coffee. He would throw himself on his bed only when entirely exhausted from lack of sleep, and he remained in complete ignorance of what was transpiring outside, the state of the weather and even of the time and day of the week. He only freed himself from this voluntary captivity when he had written the word "End" on the last page of the manuscript he began when he entered his prison.

Coral That Shocks.

On the coast of the West Indian islands a curious kind of coral is found, called "millepora." This has a most extraordinary property which makes the people who know it very shy of handling it. The moment you pick up a piece a sort of electric thrill runs through you and an agonizing pain shoots through your jaws. You feel as if every tooth and every nerve and muscle connected with them was burning. The acute pain lasts generally for about half an hour and slowly passes off, but the effects do not disappear entirely for hours. The reason of this curious shock or poisoning is a mystery.

Not Dangerous.

"Madam, I thought I would tell you I met your husband awhile ago, as I heard he had started from home to kill a man he quarreled with."

"Oh, sir, tell me—was my poor William shot?"

"No, madam. Your poor William was only half shot."—Baltimore American.

The Drummer's Sermon.

"Certainly I will make a few remarks," says the cigar salesman who, because of his solemn garb, has been mistaken for a man of the cloth. Ascending the platform, he says:

"Men are much like cigars. Often you cannot tell by the wrapper what the filler is. Sometimes a good old stogy is more popular than an imported celebrity. Some men are all right in the showcase on display, but are great disappointments when you get them home. No matter how fine a man is, eventually he meets his match. A two-fer often puts on as many airs as a fifty-center. Some men never get to the front at all except during campaigns. Some are very fancy outside and are selected for presents. Others have a rough exterior, but spread cheer and comfort about them because of what is inside. But all men, as all cigars, good or bad, two-fers, stogies or rich or poor, come to ashes at the last."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Origin of Commerce.

Commerce—the international traffic in goods as distinct from domestic traffic—was undoubtedly originated by the wonderful little people known in history as the Phoenicians. The "Yankees of antiquity," the Phoenicians traded with various peoples long before the other nations had crossed their respective frontiers. All along the shores of the Mediterranean and up the coast of the Atlantic as far north as the British isles their ships were to be found, leaving their manufactures and wonderful dyes and bringing back to Tyre tin, wool and such other articles as paid them to deal in. Creating the merchant marine so long ago that history gives us no account of it, the Phoenicians and their colonists, the Carthaginians, held it until it passed on to Greece and Rome and later along to the republics of modern Italy.—New York American.

A Scotch Anti-golf Law.

Scotland, as everybody knows, is the land where golf originated and the land where it most flourishes. But if the law were strictly enforced north of the Tweed it would go hard with the players of the royal game in "bonnie Scotland." Golf players there may not know it, but they are liable to a sentence of death for their indulgence in their favorite sport. Technically this is literally a fact. In ancient times, when Scotland always had work for her soldiers to do, all young men were required to perfect themselves in archery. They preferred to play golf, and so serious a rival did the game become that it was for a time suppressed and made a capital offense. That curious law never has been repealed and may still be found on the statute book. There seems to be no record, however, of the law ever having been enforced.

A Japanese Custom.

On the anniversary of a Japanese boy's birthday his parents present him with a huge paper fish, made of a gayly painted bag, with a hoop of proper dimensions forming the mouth. A string is tied to the hoop, and the fish is hoisted to a pole on the roof of the house. Then the wind rushing through causes the fish to swell out to the proper size and shape and gives it the appearance of swimming in the air. A Japanese boy carefully preserves every fish thus given to him. One can tell by the number of them that swim from the same pole how many birthdays the little fellow has had.

Cause For Rejoicing.

"Here," said the disgruntled actor, "I don't want this part. If I play it I'll have to die in the first act."

"Well," replied the manager, "what are you kicking about? You die a natural death, don't you? If you got a chance to come on in the second act you'd get killed."—Chicago Record Herald.

Lights His Pipe In a Gale.

I write as one who has smoked in his time more matches than most people, and it will be understood how I regard the bus driver's ability in lighting a pipe. A gale may be blowing, the horses requiring special attention, his left eye engaged on the reflection of the omnibus in shop windows, a passenger inquiring who won the Derby in 1884, constables issuing directions with the right arm, a fare hailing him from the pavement, and amid all these distractions he can strike one wooden match, hold it in the curve of his hand and the tobacco is well alight. Also while hats are blowing about the streets in the manner of leaves in autumn his headgear never goes from its place, rarely moves from the angle decided on the first journey. I have always assumed that he takes it off at night before retiring to rest, but to part with it must mean a terrible wrench.—London Express.

Male Fashions In 1850.

Male fashions of 1850 had other discomforts besides long hair. Trousers were tight and buttoned under the foot with broad straps. Every man who aspired to be well dressed wore his coat so high in the collar that the back of the hat rested on it. This fashion was so prevalent that, according to Sir Algernon West, "every hat had a crescent of cloth on the back of the brim to prevent the rubbing of the beaver or imitation beaver of which the hat was made, for silk hats were not then invented." And from the same authority we learn that "opera hats were unknown, and in the evening a folding chapeau bras was always carried under the arm. Nobody but an apothecary or a solicitor would have dreamed of leaving his hat in the hall of the house where he was calling or dining."—London Chronicle.

Dr. Yates' Trousers.

St. Catharine's was the first Cambridge college to produce a don who dared to stagger humanity by wearing trousers. He was Dr. Lowther Yates, "a large, square man from Cumberland," suspected of radical opinions, who was master of "Cat's" during the closing years of the eighteenth century. As Yates, when vice chancellor, walked in procession to the university church, wearing trousers instead of the orthodox knee breeches, somebody shouted from a window:

Gadzoons, gadzoons,
Lowther Yates in pantaloons!

The profane impromptu poet was captured and proved to be Yates' own nephew. "Gadzoons!" was a Cumbrian expletive with which Yates was wont to express intense astonishment.—Westminster Gazette.

Genesis of the Horseshoe.

It is known that the hoofs of horses were protected by boots of leather at a very early period in the world's history—at a time which at least antedates Pliny and Aristotle, both of whom make mention of the fact. These leather boots were sometimes studded with metal balls, but more usually worn without extra trimming, the cheapness of that commodity making it possible for the owner of the steed to "reboot" him at any time.

SLUMMING IN SAN FRANCISCO

What Curious Tourists Think They See in Opium Joints.

The first thing the tourist does when he comes to San Francisco is to get a guide for Chinatown, and the second thing is to ask to see an opium joint. It is curious how many good people, women young and old not excepted, demand the privilege of having themselves horrified. And all this is arranged by a guide.

This is a regular course followed by Chinatown sightseeing parties, says a writer in the Boston Transcript. It begins with the bazars, where the guides get a per cent of the business brought in, and follows with the beggars who live in rags and are alleged never to see daylight, whose alms are also split with the guides. The culmination is the opium joint, where the fiend explains in pidgin English the satanic power of the drug, describes the deliciousness of his dreams and ends with a short platitudinous sermon on the evils of opium. He is the horrible example for the good people to shudder over and thrill their friends with when they go back to Oshkosh.

Between state and federal searchers, the real opium smokers are having a hard time. The practice is carried on with cunning and secrecy. But the unsuspecting tourist thinks he knows better.

What the tourist does see is a decrepit Chinaman, who, lying on his sleeping board, roasts a "pill" of Chinese tobacco softened with molasses by holding it over a nut-oil flame and puffs it ecstatically through the bamboo pipe, giving, it must be admitted, a perfect imitation of the real thing.

Once there was a man caught who apparently headed a small smuggling ring. He was Joe Alexander, a saloon keeper widely known on the water front as a Herrin politician. Years ago he did time for smuggling silks. However that was, an attorney prominent in the graft defense convinced a jury that the saloon man did not know what was in the package he was taking to Chinatown. Following this came the arrest of Joe's brother Cliff, a boss stevedore, who came down the gangway with tins tied to his legs underneath his trousers. He was fined. Joe was indirectly punished by having to withdraw from the fight for the nomination of supervisor on the labor ticket. His saloon was believed by the inspectors to be a "fence."

Stevedores so far confessing say they were simply hired to get the stuff from ship to wharf at $1.50 a tin.

Occasionally there is a dramatic incident. Only the other day an inspector stationed in the bows of a liner at 3 o'clock in the morning saw a skiff glide out from under the wharf and come alongside. He called on the two men he could dimly make out in the skiff to surrender. They bent their oars with a splash but were brought to by a couple of pistol shots. One man plunged into the water, but soon saw there was no hope of escape. Later the pair pulled themselves on the wharf from the stringer and surrendered. One was a fireman on the Pacific Mail's tug, and the other a stevedore who had recently done six months in jail for smuggling. But as there was no evidence found against either, they were released. Evidently they were not given time to take on the goods.

In the old days smugglers were of a different breed from the modern sneak-thief variety. There is the case of Whaley, buried at sea two years ago from an army transport. In the 70s Whaley was known from Hongkong to San Francisco. He was then in the customs service, but was dismissed because of suspicious prosperity. The suspicion was not unfounded, for he straightway bought a fast yacht and disappeared. Later it was learned that he had landed cargo of opium at Honolulu. But nothing could be proved. Every now and then he would disappear and return with more wealth to squander. Finally Hawaii grew too small for him, so he went to Hongkong, traveling like a prince. There luck went against him and he drifted into the Philippines as a pirate.

Restored Into Sound Health.

F. Kelley Springfield, Ill., says: "A year ago I began to be troubled with my kidneys and bladder, which grew worse until I became alarmingly low in condition. I suffered also with severe headaches and the action of my kidneys was annoying and painful. I read about Foley Kidney Pills and after taking them a few weeks the headaches left me and the action of my bladder was again normal and I was free of all distress." Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Calls Wheat Flour Bad.

Kansas City, Mo., March 8.—J. H. Shephard, professor in the chemistry department of the South Dakota Agricultural College, testified in the Federal court at Kansas City, that bread made from bleached flour was not as nutritious as that made from unbleached.

The professor said that he had digested the bread he used in making tests with hydrochloric acid and pepsin. Bread made from unbleached flour digested quicker than that made from bleached flour bread never digested.

A "Star's" Demands.

While traveling with the object of gathering together types of African tribes for their exploitation in an exhibition an agent found a Herculean specimen of the Sudanese warrior. He was determined to get him at any price. At first the warrior refused flatly to go with him, but when the agent told him he might demand whatever sum he pleased he wavered. Finally, after long consultation with his friends, he consented, through an interpreter, to accept the engagement, but added, "I must have my wife's expenses paid while I am away." "All right," said the agent. "And I must have all my mother's expenses paid." "All right." "And I must have money for my children." "All right. How much do you want?" "And ten months is a long time." "I know it. Name your own figure." At this the warrior, with a cunning gleam in his eyes, as if he were demanding a king's ransom, named a sum which in our money amounted to a little less than $15. "And he nearly fainted," said the agent in conclusion, "when I told him he could have it!"

Halley, the Astronomer.

At fifteen years of age Edmund Halley was the captain of St. Paul's school and already an accomplished astronomer. At twenty-two he was elected a fellow of the Royal society, and before he was thirty he had encouraged Newton to produce his "Principia" and published at his own expense that famous work, in which Newton gave to the world his great discovery of the law of gravitation. For eight years Halley was editor of the "Transactions of the Royal Society," and he was only forty-seven when Oxford made him Savilian professor of astronomy. At fifty-nine he observed and predicted the circumstances of the total solar eclipse of 1715, and at sixty-four he became the astronomer royal of Great Britain. In his seventy-fifth year he announced to the Royal society that he had made 1,500 lunar observations. He was then in receipt of a salary of £100 a year, with no allowance for an assistant.

Cheerfulness.

Cheerfulness is the great cure. If you are not cheerful already try to acquire the habit. It will not require much trying either. Accordingly as one likes or dislikes beings and things he becomes cheerful or the opposite. The temptation to dislike animate or inanimate objects lies in wait for every one. Be on your guard. You can drive it off by liking a bird or a flower.

Hate never made any man happy. But in order to be unhappy one does not need to be a hater. Simple dislike will sour all the milk in the cocoanut of cheerfulness. Your choice is not restricted. If you do not like a man or do not love a woman, why, then, like a dog. Even a cat may be an inspirer of cheerfulness.

Liking is a sun which can make even an iceberg nature resplendent with the aurora of cheerfulness.—Boston Globe.

An Alligator's Nest.

Alligators' nests resemble haycocks more than anything else to which they can be compared. They average about four feet in height and five feet in diameter and are constructed of grasses and herbage. First the mother gator deposits one layer of eggs on a mortar-like floor and, having covered this with a stratum of mud and herbage about eight inches thick, lays another set of eggs upon that, and so on to the top, there being commonly from 100 to 200 eggs in a nest. With their tails the parents then beat down the tall grass and weeds to prevent the approach of unseen enemies. The female watches her eggs until they are hatched by the heat of the sun and then takes her brood under her own care, defending them and providing for their subsistence.

Antiquity of Wrestling.

Probably the first authentic record of a wrestling match is in A. D. 1222, when chivalry on the European continent was undergoing a change for the better. During the reign of Henry III. of England a match took place in St. Giles' field, London, between citizens of Westminster and the city of London proper. Wrestling was, however, popular as a pastime in England at a much earlier period, and from that country many of the different styles originated.

FEDERAL AID FOR ROADS.

Senate Reports Favorably on Highway Bill Appropriating $500,000.

Aid from the federal government is possible for roadmaking. A bill has been favorably reported from the senate committee on agriculture providing for an appropriation of $500,000 to be expended in co-operative road building. States or counties receiving the benefit of this aid would be required by the bill to duplicate the sums used in their territory.

The fundamental object of the bill is to disseminate scientific knowledge of road construction and maintenance so as to increase the interest in good roads and in the means of securing them economically. The appropriation would amount to only about 1 per cent of the total appropriation for rural delivery, and it is estimated that the resultant improvement of roads would so facilitate the travel of rural carriers as to save this amount in the long run.

The annual expenditure for country roads in the United States from all sources at the present time probably exceeds $00,000,000, and it is estimated that half of this is wasted through unwise administration and faulty methods of construction and maintenance.

The expert advice and supervision of work that would be possible with federal co-operation and the strips of good roads which their work would place for the inspection and use of the people would hasten the time of universally improved highways in this country.

DRAG HIGHWAYS NOW.

Earth Road Troubles Will Be Obviated if Work Starts In Spring.

Three-fourths of the troubles incident to the care of earth roads would be obviated if with the opening of spring the roads were dragged regularly, so that the water would run off and the surface dry out rapidly. When the frost is going out of the ground there must necessarily be a few days of bad roads.

If farmers would keep off the roads as much as possible during these few days, then just as soon as the soil settles go over the road with a drag or a harrow, fill up the ruts and chuck holes so that the surface water would run off, the earth roads would be in condition months ahead of the usual good period and a great deal of the ammunition of the loud mouthed hard road advocate would be destroyed.

Stone roads are too costly for the majority of localities in the Mississippi valley. Misguided enthusiasts and tireless promoters will not admit this, but the taxpaying farmer and the experienced road engineer know that by properly draining, carefully grading and conscientiously repairing earth roads highways of superior excellence may be obtained during those portions of the year when the transporting of heavy loads is necessary. Look after your roads, and do it now.

Consider the Children.

Look well to the sort of road that goes by a farm before you determine to buy and make your home there. Consider the young folks. "What is land worth at the other end of this road as compared with that which lies six miles away in the other direction along a smooth road? Every grown farm boy should have a good horse and a good road upon which to drive if he is worthy of so noble an animal as the horse. When the young farmer starts himself he will do well to locate on a good road. There are always enough persons who are not thankful for advice, especially if it be in print, and who want the cheap land at the end of the hilly road."

Improving Old Highways.

Frequently old roads can be greatly improved at a very little added cost. Thoroughly drain by using tile and render more efficient the open ditches along the sides. Careful attention to the road surface, keeping it smooth and free from hollows, will result in very marked improvement. Sand and gravel added to a clay road will often make it much better, and clay added to a sand road frequently is of great benefit. Filling hollows is one of the most effective methods of improving roads in a rough country. The soil is easily dragged into the hollows, and the grade is thus materially reduced.

Auto Chains Ruinous to Roads.

Anti-skidding chains on automobiles are tearing county roads to pieces, according to a county road supervisor in New Jersey, who threatens to invoke the law to cause the arrest of the users of the chains. According to the supervisor, use of the chains was condoned during the winter, when frozen road were dangerous at turns, but he claims that the practice has been continued into the spring until drastic measures must be taken to save the roads from destruction.

Get Busy on the Roads Now.

A considerable amount of money is annually expended on roads for which adequate return is not received by reason that the work is not done at the proper season. There is a proper time for building new or rebuilding old earth roads just as much as there is a proper time for doing farm work, and that time is in the spring, as the ground settles after the frost has left it.

Improved Roads Improve Schools.

Good roads are greater incentives for progress in the rural community than any other factor. Without good roads it is impossible to improve the public schools, to erect churches and to build up the farm by rotation, diversified and intensified farming.

For the Children

An Amusing Trick to Try on Your Friends.

The picture illustrates an interesting and apparently simple performance. Tell one of your audience to take a pole and place the end in the angle of the wall and the floor and while holding it in that position to bend under it and come up on the opposite side. The operator will usually face the wall and begin a series of frantic efforts that will result in his measuring his length on the floor. After he has made a failure take the pole and place it in position yourself. Then, turning with your back to the wall, slowly bend under the pole, keeping the pole in its first position and pressing hard downward with your hands.

Game of Alphabet.

From a box of cardboard letters twenty are dealt to each player and are turned face down on the table before him.

Beginning at the left of the dealer, the first player turns up a letter so that all can see it and calls for a quotation from some well known author or poet, beginning with the letter turned. As soon as the letter is exposed the person appointed to be timekeeper either slowly counts thirty aloud or keeps his eyes on his watch, calling out "Time!" when the half minute has elapsed. If in that interval no one has answered the drawer of the letter may then give a quotation himself and keep the letter, or if all fail to respond it is laid aside, to be given to the one who next wins a letter.

If some one makes a quotation that is unfamiliar to all present he may be challenged to give the author. If unable to do this the letter is thrown out. The player having the most letters when the game stops is the winner.

Three Smart Girls.

Boys are usually given all the credit for playing practical jokes, but last winter three small girls got a little ahead of anything their brothers had done without being unduly mischievous. They built a snow man in their front yard near the sidewalk, and they built him around an iron pipe, which opened at the man's mouth. The other end was attached to another pipe, which ran under the snow through a basement window of the house, where the girls took up their position. Whenever any person passed along the sidewalk one of the girls would speak into the end of the pipe, and her voice, carried under the snow, had all the appearance of having originated in the snow man's throat. The talking statue became the wonder of the neighborhood, and for a long time no one discovered that his voice came from an ordinary speaking tube similar to those that end in the vestibules of flat buildings.—Chicago News.

A Wise Old Cat.

"My grandmother," writes Miss Loudoun, the owner of several prize cats, in the Strand, "owned a fine cat whose leg got damaged by the wheel of a perambulator. Of course a great fuss was made over the injured limb, and nothing was too good for Richard. Milk with a strong infusion of rich cream was a favorite form of sympathy. Every one noticed that the leg was a long time healing, but at last the surgeon declared it perfectly healed. Off his guard, Richard used to scamper and play, but the moment he saw my grandmother coming with a saucer of milk up would come his paw from the ground, and he would hobble about on three legs, as if in great pain. He never tried the ruse on other members of the family."

CHICAGO MERCHANT MAKES STATEMENT.

After Spending Thousands of Dollars and Consulting the Most Eminent Physicians, He Was Desperate.

CHICAGO, ILLS.—Mr. J. G. Becker, of 134 Van Buren St., a well-known wholesale dry goods dealer, states as follows:

"I have had catarrh for more than thirty years. Have tried everything on earth and spent thousands of dollars for other medicines and with physicians, without getting any lasting relief, and can say to you that I have found Peruna the only remedy that has cured me permanently.

"Peruna has also cured my wife of catarrh. She always keeps it in the house for an attack of cold, which it invariably cures in a very short time."

What a Summer Cold May Do.

$3.50 Recipe Cures Weak Kidneys, Free

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling Etc

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too-frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscles weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for those troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this Dr. A. E. Robinson, "X" 325 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich, and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has a great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

Here and There.

Clyde Jodon, of Altoona, spent Sunday with his family at this place.

Miss Helen Bickford, of Lock Haven, is visiting Mrs. Clark, on High Street.

Mrs. Charles Eckenroth spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Noll, at Pleasant Gap.

Archibald Saxe, of Scranton, is visiting at the Harper home, on West Linn Street.

Miss Minnie Gray departed on Saturday for Homestead for a three weeks' vacation.

Miss Nettie Forcey departed on Saturday for a four week's visit at her home, at Woodland.

Malcolm Waite on Saturday returned to Pitcairn, where he is employed in the Pennsylvania Railroad shops.

Miss Elizabeth Morris last week entertained Miss Ross, of Altoona, who was in town for the Academy dance.

In social circles it is understood that the wedding of Miss Kathryn Brisbin and Bert Robb will occur on Thursday June 30.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Osman, of Beaver Row, are rejoicing over the arrival of a fine baby boy on Tuesday morning.

William Rider, of Bush Addition, departed on Saturday for Pittsburg. Here's hoping he lands the job he has his eye on out there.

Miss Anna Baker, of Altoona, spent Sunday with Miss Mary and Henry S. Linn, at their home on Allegheny Street.

Miss Beula Dale, a trained nurse in a sanatarium at Atlantic City, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Dale, of Bellefonte.

Miss Agnes Piper, of Tyrone, attended the Bellefonte Academy dance, on Friday night, last, and was the guest of Miss Mildred Locke.

Mrs. James A. Beaver on Monday returned home from Huntingdon. She contemplates going to State College on Saturday to remain over Sunday.

Bobby Roberts, a former employe of the Potter-Hoy Hardware Co., returns today to Berwindale after an enjoyable visit of several days with Bellefonte friends.

Miss Bella Johnson, of Spring Street, last week entertained Miss Nellie Struble, of Hunter's Park, who was in town for the High School commencement exercises.

Miss Mable Laity, who was an operator in the Bell Telephone Company exchange here about four years ago, died on Saturday at her late home, at Wilkes-Barre, from nervous prostration.

Frank Streightoff, an instructor at the Bellefonte Academy during the last year, departed this week for his home, at Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mrs. Henry Lowery, of State College, attended the High School commencement and was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Bricker, of Bishop Street.

Mrs. James Williams, of State College, last week visited Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Hicklin and attended the commencement exercises of the Hight School.

Judging by the broad smile he wore as he was on his way to the train on Monday we surely thought that Herman Holz was about to depart to see that granddaughter in New York. But it was only a business trip to Williamsport, although we afterward discovered that the smile was in anticipation of a good time with the baby in the very near future.

Mrs. John Wilson returned on Monday afternoon to her home at Altoona. If Johh could have as good a position in Bellefonte as he has at Altoona, we would wish him back again, but with the rapid progress he is making with the Western Union Telegraph Company he is heading for the larger instead of the smaller cities. Altoona isn't so far away and so long as the trains run Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are not likely to let many weeks go by without a little trip to Bellefonte.

Everybody having a garden is interested in learning little things which add to the value of vegetables, for after all, no vegetables quite come up to those fresh from one's garden. Lewis Peters, of Milesburg, one of our valued subscribers, was a caller several days ago to advance the date on his paper another year, and while here he gave us a point on growing lettuce. Mr. Peters said that he has found it a good plan to tie a string about the leaves when the lettuce is beginning to head. This, he said, results in a more solid head than is secured where the leaves droop from their own weight.

All kinds of letters are received at a news paper office. On Monday we received a nice one from Andrew J. Long, who is prospering in Chicago, enclosing a one dollar bill for "The Republican" during the coming year. , Mr. Long says that he has been following the political contest in Centre County with interest, that he favors Heinle, "first and last and also Teddy." Mr. Long apparently doesn't have the same feeling toward Taft, and says that he wouln'dt vote for him. Being interested in the political situation here and a subscriber to "The Republican," Mr. Long received a copy of our special edition on Monday and thus had all the news several days in advance of those who read some other paper.

Dr. Thomas C. VanTries is one of our readers who needs no prodding to attend to his subscription. While we were on our way to the office yesterday morning the genial Doctor stopped us long enough to hand over a one dollar bill, with the comment that he guessed it was about time his paper was marked another year in advance.

Don't forget the concert in the Presbyterian church this (Thursday) evening, for the benefit of the Bellefonte hospital. Under the direction of Professor Hall a choir of fifty voices will render the grand oratorio, "Gaul's Holy City." A rare musical treat is in store for all who attend. At the same time the proceeds will be devoted to one of the finest institutions in the world.

George W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad, spent several hours in town yesterday as the guest of Col. W. Fred Reynolds. The latter and Joseph L. Montgomery went to Tyrone in Col. Reynolds' automobile where they met Mr. Boyd and brought him to Bellefonte. After luncheon at the residence of Col. Reynolds, they accompanied Mr. Boyd to Lock Haven.

When we were going through our mail on Tuesday we found one letter, addressed in the business envelope of Merv. Betz, of Jacksonville, and we quite naturally concluded that he was going to have something to say about the recent primaries down there. It turned out that instead of the letter coming from Mr. Betz it was from Alvin Confer, of Nittany, one of our valued subscribers, and contained a one dollar bill with instructions to send him "The Republican" for another year. Letters such as that from Mr. Confer are always welcome at this office.

Hon. William M. Allison, of Spring Mills, this week joined the procession of regular readers of "The Republican." He commissioned his brother, Archie, to deliver the one dollar bill. We know of no one who hands over a one dollar bill more gracefully than does Archie, and incidentally we know of no one we would rather enroll as a subscriber than his good looking brother, William M.

The reception and dance of the Bellefonte Academy, on Friday evening, last, proved to be a brilliant affair. Both features were a success in every. The reception was held at the Academy and was attended by the many friends of the institution. The Armory was prettily decorated for the dance, which followed the reception, and was attended by many persons, both from Bellefonte and from outside points.

Thieves, on Saturday, last, entered the harness shop of C. E. Shoemaker, at Lock Haven, and rifled the money drawer but forgot to take away $200 in gold which they found and had poured into a receptacle with some other coins. It is supposed that something frightened the thieves just about the time they were preparing to leave and that in their hurry they overlooked the money. The Western Union office was also entered, but here too the thieves secured little or nothing of value.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Miller is in a state of joyful anticipation these days. Little Paul Irvine Miller, their 5-year-old son is expected home on Friday, June 24, from the Pennsylvania Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, at Mt. Airy, near Philadelphia, and his parents are counting the days until he will return. Paul is just finishing his first year at the institution, where he is a great favorite with the instructors and the other pupils and where it is believed that he will eventually learn to speak. He will spend the summer in Bellefonte and return to the school when it reopens on September 7.

PROF. J. ANGEL.

Eyesight Specialist.

Wednesday and Thursday, June 15 and 16

AT BROCKERHOFF HOUSE

To my Patrons and the Public: Having become established in Bellefonte and all over the county, as a successful Eye Specialist, and through the large increase in my business, I have concluded it will be to the best interest of myself and the public to make a reduction of 25 per cent in all my charges. This will enable those who have felt they could not afford to pay former prices to secure proper treatment for their eyes at the lowest possible expense. All parents are advised who have children that go to school who are not bright in learning or their studies, should have their eyes examined and see if they need glasses. You will thereby save lots of trouble and make good scholars of them. At the Brockerhoff House Wednesday and Thursday, June 15th and 16th.
